TERRIBLE TRAGEDIES.

Murder and Suicide by a German School Teacher.

A Guilty Love Culminates in a Double Tragedy.

DARING ATTEMPT TO MURDER A BOY

The Victim in a Dangerous Condition.

Serious Affray in a Barroom—A Policeman Shot by a Rowdy.

A terrible tragedy occurred last evening in a house of assignation in the Fourteenth Ward, where a man killed his paramour and himself, both the man and the woman expiring soon after their admission to Bellevue Hospital.

It appears that a well dressed man was, during the past five months, in the frequent habit of visiting the house No. 20 Elizabeth-street, near Hester-street, kept by a Mrs. PAULINE BECK. He usually came on Saturday and engaged apartments for the following day. These visits usually occurred at intervals of from three to five weeks. On Sunday the man always came first, and opened the door for an unknown woman, who was always neatly dressed and closely veiled. The proprietress of the house had no knowledge of either of the parties, and was led to suppose that they came from Westchester County. She knew the man to be a German for he always spoke to her in that language. A short time since a female acquaintance informed her that the male visitor was a teacher in one of the public schools in Williamsburg and a married man. Like all the rest of her infamous trade Mrs. BECK gave herself no trouble about the identity of the visitors, content in the receipt of their custom.

A few weeks ago the man called at the house quite unexpectedly, and was given a rear room on the third floor. On New Year's afternoon he again called, and insisted upon seeing this rear room. Yesterday evening, about five o'clock, he entered the house, and was soon after joined by his female friend. For an hour and a half the house remained in quiet, which was at length broken by the detonation of a pistol, the report reaching the ears of the domestic, who at once petitioned her mistress of the alarming fact. As there were no other visitors in the house at the time, Mrs. BECK ran up stairs to the room, and finding it bolted, she demanded admission. Scarcely had she done so when a pistol was discharged a second time, which affrighted her, and she ran down into the street and called in officer MOORE, of the Fourteenth Precinct, who happened to be patrolling his post in Elizabeth-street at the time.

The policeman at once entered the house, and in a loud tone demanded an entrance to the room, repeating the summons a second time, preparatory to forcing the door open. The door was opened in a slow and uncertain way by the woman, as she sat in a chair near by, and as the officer entered she exclaimed, "For God's sake help me out of this, or I'll die!"

She was bleeding profusely from a bullet wound in the left temple, and her dark dress was dabbled in warm blood. Alongside of the bed, and stretched out on the floor, was the man, who was also bleeding from a similar wound on the right temple, about half an inch over the eye. In his right hand was tightly clenched a small-sized Smith & Wesson revolver, perfectly new, four barrels of which had been discharged. He was entirely insensible when examined. As soon as possible the officer procured a hack, and with the assistance of brother officers removed them to the Station House in Spring-street.

Captain EDWARD WALSH, commanding the precinct, then hurriedly examined the persons of both the man and the woman, and, finding them to be fatally wounded, at once directed Sergeant SAMUEL W. CHESBROUGH and Officer MINOTT to convey them to Bellevue Hospital. The transfer was accomplished as rapidly as possible, but the woman expired a few minutes after admission to the institution. The house surgeon examined the man and pronounced his death inevitable. He died about 9 o'clock. The Sergeant found a love letter on the person of the female, from which it appeared her name was ANNIE MCNAMARA, and that her lover was one GEORGE BAUMAN. Miss MCNAMARA was a young woman, evidently possessing considerable personal attraction, and was judged to be a native of the United States, and about 22 years of age. BAUMAN, the murderer and suicide, was, as has been already stated, a native of Germany, 28 years of age.

The Police of the Fourteenth Ward ascertained that both were engaged as school teachers in the public schools in Brooklyn, E. D., though precisely in which institutions could not be learned. This is the sum and substance of the information gleaned by Captain WALSH's officers, and it will require another day to definitely ascertain the identity of the deceased.

The nature and circumstances that led to this double tragedy are, of course, matters of mere conjecture. The most plausible idea is that jealousy had a part in the emotions which actuated BAUMAN in murdering his paramour, and then committing suicide.

The writer visited the scene of the tragedy soon after the fact became known to the Police. The house is a neat brick one, and stands in a dark portion of the street, surrounded by dilapidated dwellings of wood and brick, and appeared a singular rendezvous for persons pretending to respectability. The room is small and easily furnished, and the floor is covered with an oil cloth of ancient pattern. A small stove warmed the apartment. All traces of the bloody event had been already removed, the oilcloth being quite damp in two places. Mrs. BECK could give no further information than that she had alarmed the Police, and treated the matter in a very light and heartless manner, though she expressed herself as regretful for the dead woman, and her miserable fate. The case will come under the hands of a Coroner to-day, when further developments will no doubt be made.

Singular Attempt to Murder a Boy.

While the Fourteenth Ward tragedy was receiving proper attention at the hands of the Police, a singular attempt was made in the Tenth Ward to murder a young boy. About 8 o'clock last evening, as GERRAVEN BUSSEN, aged 14, and residing with his parents at No. 120 Chrystie-street, was approaching his residence, he was suddenly accosted by RICHARD BOSSE, aged 20, and residing at No. 113 Chrystie-street, who thrust his thumb into the victim's mouth, and so held his helpless and unable to make an outcry. While in this painful position, the unfortunate boy was cruelly beaten on the head and face with some blunt instrument by BOSSE and a companion, named JOSEPH SLOWE, aged 19, and also residing at No. 113 Chrystie-street. Young BUSSEN was so terribly wounded that he was soon rendered senseless. A citizen saw the assault committed, and arrested some of the ruffians, who at once broke away from him. The citizen then ran to the Station House in Eldridge-street for assistance, but Officer RYAN in the meantime succeeded in arresting both BOSSE and SLOWE, who were locked up for the night. Their victim was removed to his home and placed under medical care, being reported in a very critical condition. No clue to the motive, except that of rowdyism, could be gained, as the prisoners declined to make any statement in explanation.

The Reynolds Stabbing Affray—A Probable Murder.

We have some further details of the felonious assault committed by PETER REYNOLDS, of No. 120 Mulberry-street, a notorious ruffian of the Fourteenth Ward. The fact was mentioned yesterday that REYNOLDS had on Saturday afternoon wilfully quarrelled with PATRICK MURDAY, of New-Jersey, and stabbed him in the right side, the lung being severed by the knife used by REYNOLDS. MURDAY was removed to Bellevue Hospital, and the House Surgeon reported him yesterday as in a very critical condition, and exercised but slight hopes of his recovery. REYNOLDS, it appears, made some show of resistance when arrested, and at bed and his brothers are notorious for their frequent assaults on Police officers, the patrolman having him in custody gave PETER a sound drubbing for his pains, causing the prisoner to present an awful appearance when arraigned before Justice HOGAN yesterday morning. The Magistrate sent for Mrs. MARY BARRETT, the sister of the wounded man, who made the necessary affidavit, and the prisoner was remanded without bail.

A Terrible Barroom Battle.

At an early hour yesterday morning PATRICK QUINN, alias "Paddy the Smasher," restaurant in Madison-street, and, until recently, proprietor of a liquor saloon near "Reddy the Blacksmith's" den in Chatham-square, entered JUDSON's saloon, at the corner of New Bowery and James-street, and acted in a disorderly manner. A quarrel soon occurred, and a general fight was the result, during which JAMES SULLIVAN, of No. 14 Roosevelt-street, was cut in seven places on the head and body with a knife in the hands of QUINN, who inflicted one or two very dangerous wounds. QUINN was also terribly handled by his opponents, and would probably have been beaten to death had not the Police put in a timely appearance. QUINN was subsequently committed by Justice HOGAN to await the result of SULLIVAN's wounds.

A Police Officer Shot by Rowdies.

At 6½ o'clock last evening, while Officer SUTTON, of the Eighteenth Precinct, was patrolling his post in Lexington-avenue, near Twenty-fifth street, he noticed three rowdies standing themselves with the amiable occupation of ringing doorbells in that neighborhood, greatly to the annoyance of the residents. The officer at once made a dash and succeeded in arresting one of the gentlemen, starting with his prisoner for the Station House in Twenty-second-street. The companions of the man under arrest followed, and succeeded in approaching Officer SUTTON so closely as to enable one of them to discharge his pistol, the bullet taking effect in the neck, and inflicting a severe though, fortunately, not dangerous wound. The patrolman was, however, so startled by the receipt of the pistol ball, that he involuntarily released his prisoner, who, of course, took to his heels. The Police profess to have a clue to the gang, and anticipate an early capture.

Daring Attempt at Highway Robbery.

About 12:30 o'clock, as the writer was proceeding down town through Centre-street, near Grand street, he saw five ruffians assault two gentlemen who they chanced to meet. Without any provocation the gang seized the person of one of their victims, lured no doubt by his gold watch chain, which glistened in the gaslight, and attempted to take from him the watch, meanwhile beating him in the face and pulling his beard. An alarm was at once given and responded to by half a dozen policemen, though they unfortunately failed to make any arrests, as the villains scattered and escaped round a convenient corner. The assaulted party declined to give his name, merely stating that he resided in Brooklyn. The whole occurrence scarcely occupied three minutes and was a most daring outrage.

Brutal Assault Upon a Man and Woman.

WILLIAM and JAMES FLETCHER were arraigned before Justice LEDWITH yesterday on a charge of having assaulted FRANK BARGER, of No. 204 West Eighteenth-street, and ANNA ROON, both of whom were dangerously stabbed in the side. As neither of the victims were able to prefer the complaint, an affidavit was made by Mrs. LOUISA BARGER and medical certificates exhibited. Both of the prisoners were held to await the result of the wounds. JAMES FLETCHER was fully committed to answer a charge of assaulting Mrs. BARGER.

The Hayes Shooting Affray.

Mr. ALEXANDER HAYES, of No. 216 East Twenty-seventh street, who shot THOMAS MCCARTHEY, of No. 241 East Twenty-second-street, on Saturday, while resisting the rescue of a prisoner under arrest, was yesterday held to bail for trial by Justice LEDWITH, to answer the charge of felonious assault.

Murder and Attempted Suicide in Bergen, N.J.—The Tragic Homicide at Sleepy Hollow—Intemperance and Jealousy Assign.

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 2.—A man named JOHN LEMMON to-day shot Mrs. ATWOOD four times with a revolver. The wounds will probably prove fatal. LAWRENCE afterwards cut his throat in a shocking manner, but the wounds are not considered dangerous. Rum and jealousy were the cause.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 1.—A terrible tragedy occurred at Sleepy Hollow, near Tarrytown, about 3 o'clock this afternoon. A man named V. W. BUCKHOUT shot his wife, a New-York merchant named ALFRED RANDALL, and a son of the latter named CHAS. RANDALL. Mrs. BUCKHOUT was shot through the temple; ALFRED RANDALL through the heart, and CHAS. RANDALL in the side. Mrs. BUCKHOUT and CHAS. RANDALL are dead. ALFRED RANDALL lies in a dangerous condition. BUCKHOUT gave himself up immediately after the occurrence, and was lodged in jail at White Plains. The cause of this appalling tragedy is unknown. Some persons ascribe it to jealousy on the part of the husband, while others believe that he is insane.

The New Legal Tender Notes.

From the Washington Republican, Jan. 1.

The new legal tender notes of the denomination of five, twenties and fifties will be ready for general circulation the early part of next week. On Wednesday last Mr. JOHN GARRIT, the President of the American Bank-Note Printing Company, and Mr. SPENCER, the President of the Mutual Bank-Note Company, met Acting Assistant Treasurer HAWKSHURST for the purpose of discussing and settling certain points of difference in the Government contract for printing legal tenders and fractional currency. It appears that Superintendent MCCARTHY, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, has, for some time past, been endeavoring by for the Secretary to have the printing of the backs of the new issue of legal tender done at the Government Printing Bureau, which was met with the strongest opposition by the New-York Companies. Finally the Secretary being convinced that the Government would save at least $20,000 annually, he ordered that portion of the work to be hereafter executed at the Printing Bureau. The representative of the New-York Companies agreed to this, and after signing their contract, sixty days were extended the Government had the right to dispose of any portion of the work. The argument was next pressed upon the Government by the American Bank-Note Company, and the discussion becoming somewhat personal, the Acting Secretary withdrew, saying that they might settle matters controversial among themselves—whereupon the dispute ended. As the matter stands the printing will be done by the Government, and the contract of the New-York Companies it is likely, will have the effect of transferring the entire work of printing both legal tender and fractional currency in this city.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

THE STORM.

The Gale and Rain on the Hudson—The Hudson River Railroad Submerged and Washed Away at Various Points.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 2.—A heavy southeast rain storm prevailed all last night and the greater part of to-day. As a consequence, the flood tide is very full. Reports from the south state that the down track of the Hudson River Railroad is badly washed near Crugar's, so that no trains can pass over it. The storm to-night is clearing away, but the wind is blowing a gale from the southeast. It is feared that there is a freshet in the Upper Hudson. A heavy tide is expected to-night. Several steamboats have passed north.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 3—Midnight.—Later reports received from below state that the down track of the Hudson River Railroad, from Rhinebeck to Peekskill drawbridge, is washed away, and that the up track is also very badly washed. The New-York express going north passed over slowly, but no more trains can go over it. Further north, between Garrison's and Fort Montgomery, about a hundred feet of the track is gone. Near Cragg's a schooner lies pounding against the track. At 10 o'clock P. M. the wind shifted to the southwest and is still blowing heavy. The ice is piled twenty-five feet high in the channel near Castleton, and the railroad track at Tivoli is covered with water. Six steamboats have gone north, and the Norwich is near Albany.

Heavy Rain in the East.

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 2.—A very heavy rain storm prevailed here all day.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 2.—A heavy rain storm prevailed here to-night.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—A drenching southeasterly rain storm continued last night and continues this evening.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 2.—The storm to-day was very severe here, though no serious damage is yet reported. The Connecticut River is clear of ice, and steamers run regularly from this point to the Sound.

The Gale in this City—Houses Blown Down—Trains Delayed—The Tempest Among the Telegraph Wires.

The rain storm which prevailed during the greater part of the day yesterday was succeeded by a violent gale which did a great deal of damage in the vicinity of this City. The thermometer during the latter part of the day fell rapidly. At noon it marked 48 degrees and late in the evening the mercury was as low as 30 degrees. In this City no serious casualties are reported. A few signs were blown down and rotten limbs of trees amputated. The telegraph worked badly, and in some cases not at all.

The rotundity of the storm in Brooklyn were not obtained last night in consequence of the disordered condition of the Police telegraph. A few instances, however, demonstrated the force of both the rain and terrific hurricane respectively. The fine new organ at St. Ann's Church on the Heights is some way had as succeeded in "wetting its whistles" that when the accomplished LOEBEN endeavored to perform with his usual dexterity, the sounds given outwere as the gurgling of many waters or embarrassed streamlets—the grand organ had got under the weather and was utterly incapable of evoking a single orderly sound. So the service had to proceed minus the music.

Six frames of two-story houses, in Lynah street, near Marcy-avenue, which had been very clumsy braced by boards temporarily nailed outside, were blown down about 12 o'clock M. The damage amounted to about $150.

The three-story frame building in process of erection at the corner of Baltic and Nevins streets, owned by JAMES GRAY, was blown into a wreck. The damage is claimed to be about $1,500. The gale caused considerable damage in the City of Newark, several trees were blown down, and windows and skylights were broken in many places. The train which left Jersey City for Newark at 6:30 o'clock last evening was delayed for nearly two hours on account of the severe gale. Just before entering Bergen Cut it was discovered that a telegraph pole had been blown across the track. This was removed after half an hour's hard work, and the train again proceeded. In crossing the Newark Meadows the cars rocked so fearfully that they were in great danger of being blown off the track. Windows were broken through in many of the cars, and the lights were blown out in all of them. There were nearly 600 people on the train, and during the passage from West End to East Newark they were all in a state of terrible excitement. The passengers were unanimous in their praise of Mr. BRANG, the conductor of the train, who by his coolness and promptness in stopping the train in time to cut for obstructions on the track, no doubt prevented a severe accident. The train arrived in Newark at 8 o'clock, having been nearly two hours accomplishing a distance of eight miles.

The storm worked damage in Hudson County, N. J. There is not a county which has exposed extent, of course, the City of Jersey City a frame building at the corner of Prospect and North Seventh streets, was blown down. The building had recently been erected at an expense of $2,000. Four frame houses on the corner of Wayne and Marcellus streets, belonging to JAMES HARRISON, were also blown down, causing a loss of $6,000. A frame building, worth about $600, upon the flats, at Hoboken, suffered likewise. Several small buildings in West Hoboken were also leveled by the gale. The roof of a building on Clinton-street, in Hudson City, was much damaged by the gale, and the upper floor under the roof was wet by the rain, and considerably damaged. In Bergen City trees and fences were blown down, but no serious damage is reported.

A house on the Paterson Plank road, near Hoboken, owned by Mr. THOMAS HYATT, was blown down, causing a loss of $1,000. The roof of a barn in course of erection in Bramhall-avenue, Bergen, was blown to pieces; loss about $600. In Hudson City, trees were uprooted, and one frame building, owned by Mr. HENRY REED, was thrown down. The ferry boats crossing the river weathered the gale with some difficulty, frequently dipping to the northeast until the waves dashed on the deck. The New-Brunswick, of the Cortlandt-street line, came into the slip at Cortland-street, at 7 o'clock, with a tremendous crash, smashing in the rails and shock some of the upper work of the slip, and causing considerable damage.

EMANCIPATION.

Celebration of the Anniversary of the Proclamation—Resolutions Adopted at Nashville, Texas.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 2.—The colored people of Nashville yesterday celebrated the anniversary of the proclamation of freedom. After parading through the streets, they assembled in the Capitol and organized a convention. ABBOTT also participated in the Convention. Letters from General HOWARD and others, excusing themselves from attending, were read. Several speeches were made, and resolutions adopted, expressing gratitude to Mr. LINCOLN for their freedom, thanking the army for their services, and the anti-war abolitionists for what they had done for them while in slavery; pledging themselves not to engage in rebellion or support those who do; expressing confidence in the President, Cabinet and Congress; declaring they knew but two parties, Republicans and Democrats; pledging support to the former; expressing the opinion that the present Legislature is hostile to their interests; approving the action of Congress in the case of Georgia; indorsing the resolutions of Mr. KELLEY, of Pennsylvania, offered in the Federal House of Representatives, looking to the reconstruction of Tennessee by placing her under military rule; and calling upon our Senators and Representatives to support the movement—this they regard as necessary under the present State Government, as they have no security for life and property. J. H. SUMNER and J. C. NAPIER were appointed a committee to bear the resolutions to Washington.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 3.—The various colored societies yesterday celebrated the anniversary of their emancipation, despite the snow and muddy condition of the streets.

EUROPE.

A Document of the French Cabinet—New Year's Day at the Tuileries—The London Press on the Alabama Correspondence.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—It is certain that the new Ministry will be announced day after to-morrow. The Journal Officiel has not yet published a list of the appointments, but La Liberté, the organ of M. OLLIVIER, states to-day that the Ministry is constituted, and publishes the following as the announcement which will be officially promulgated on Monday:

Minister of Justice—M. EMILE OLLIVIER.

Minister of the Interior—M. CHEVANDIER DE VALDROME.

Minister of Foreign Affairs—M. le Deputé GAUDIN.

Minister of Commerce—M. le Deputé COUYER.

Minister of Public Works—M. MAURICE RICHARD.

MM. MAGNE, BOUREAU, CHASSELOUP, LAURAT, LEBOEUF and RIGULT DE GENOUILLY will retain their positions.

M. BENEDETTI, the French Envoy at Washington, declined the portfolio of the Interior on account of his deficiency in oratory. Of the Ministry as thus given by La Liberté, four of the members are Senators and six are members of the Chamber of Deputies. M. GAUDIN, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, was formerly a Minister Plenipotentiary and also Councilor of State. CHEVANDIER DE VALDROME, Minister of the Interior, was second Vice-President of the Corps Legislatif. All the others are well known in political circles.

PARIS, Jan. 1—6 P. M.—It is stated that the Emperor signed the decree confirming the new Ministry last night. To-day the Emperor received the Diplomatic Corps. In answer to the usual address, he returned his thanks and said that the presence of all the foreign representatives was a proof of the friendly relations existing between their respective Governments and France. He then conversed freely with the chiefs of the various legations.

MADRID, Jan. 1.—The Imparcial, referring to a recently-circulated contradiction of the report that the partisans of the Duke of MONTPENSIER and the Prince of ASTURIAS were working in conjunction, asserts that the denial is only applicable to certain persons, and not to the entire party. The reception of a note from the United States Government, threatening recognition of Cuba, is officially denied.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Spectator commenting on recent diplomatic correspondence between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain, says that the notes of Mr. FISH are improvements on Mr. SEWARD'S. His dispatches contain no buncombe or flourishes. Yet there is too much undignified and sentimental complaint, instead of close adherence to legal questions. The American case on the Alabama question is a strong one, and one in which all maritime powers are deeply interested, but Mr. FISH does not do it justice....The Saturday Review, referring to the Alabama dispute, says the Americans uniformly assume that a blockaded port is no port, yet they properly decline to interfere with their vessels running into blockaded ports of Cuba....The Times gravely predicts a prosperous commercial year, because midway between the troubles of 1866 and the period when a new inflation is sure, new American schemes are excluded from European markets by the action of the Judiciary and Legislature of New-York regarding Erie. Federal securities will lose their demand in Europe because of their advanced price....The Peabody trustees have purchased the hospital in Blackfriars Road as a site for a memorial hospital....The Paris correspondent of the Globe, commenting on the official denial of the censorship over the French cable, says all telegrams are received by the Minister of the Interior.

THE PACIFIC COAST.

Treasure for China—Celestials Returning Home—Austrian Treaties with South American States.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1.—The steamer China sailed to-day for Hong Kong and Yokohama. She carried $382,000 in treasure, of which $345,000 was for Hong Kong, $16,000 for Shanghae and $20,000 for Yokohama. Her list of cabin passengers was small, but she had 400 Chinese in the steerage.....The weather to-day is clear and warm, and business is suspended....KARL VON SCHERZER, the Austrian Commissioner, who concluded the recent treaties between Austria and Japan and China, sails for Guatemala and Panama on the steamer of Jan. 5. At the latter place he expects to meet the Austrian frigate Danau, and will proceed to Peru, Chili, Uruguay and Buenos Ayres, with each of which he is instructed to negotiate treaties.

The Remains of Mr. Peabody—The Convoying Squadron—Preparation for the Reception.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Subsequent orders to Commander BLAKE, of the war steamer Alaska, directed that vessel to proceed to Portland with the Terror, to convoy the Monarch, with Mr. PEABODY'S remains, into that port. The Alaska will afterwards proceed to the East Indies.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 2.—A committee from Salem visited Portland yesterday in relation to the reception of Mr. PEABODY'S remains, but no new arrangements were made.

Charity in Syracuse—The Hearts of the Poor Made Glad.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 1.—A grand barbecue was held here to-day, for the entertainment of the poor of Syracuse. It was provided by JOHN GARDNAY. Thousands of persons from the surrounding country came to town, and the streets have all day worn a holiday appearance. Clinton-square was packed with spectators, estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000 in number. Two whole beeves were roasted and another cut up raw and distributed to the poor, together with five thousand loaves of bread. The butchers and bakers of the city aided in the preparation. Several ex-Mayors and other prominent citizens, wearing white aprons, waited upon the crowds of applicants for food. The whole community seemed to take great interest in the affair.

Fire in Manchester—Accounts Settled.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 2.—Fire broke out last night in a portion of SAYER, BOWER & CO's furniture and auctioneering establishment. It was soon subdued by the Fire Department, though considerable damage was caused by water. The loss was fully covered by insurance.....An Irishman named HENRY MCCABE attempted to kill his wife to-day. He cut her severely on the head with an ax, as she was trying to escape from the house.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—An unknown man, about 40 years of age, apparently intoxicated, walked off an East Boston ferry boat last evening and was drowned.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 2.—General GEORGE F. SHEPLEY took the oath of office yesterday as United States Circuit Judge.

BUFFALO, Jan. 2.—The weather is still remarkably warm and it is raining slightly. The thermometer to-day has fallen to a point lower than has been known in fifteen years.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 2.—At noon on Saturday, Constable PRATT, of Meriden, while walking on the railroad track in that place, was run over by a switch engine and received injuries from which he died in two hours. He was deaf and did not hear the whistle.

WASHINGTON.

The Gold Sales and Bond Purchases for January—Investigation of the Great Gold Conspiracy—Marine Hospitals—The French Cable and the French Government.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The orders of the Secretary of the Treasury for gold sales and bond purchases for the month of January, given to-night, show that he will continue his policy in a modified shape, the sales of gold authorized being but $4,000,000 against $5,000,000 in December, and the purchase of bonds only $2,000,000 against $3,000,000 last month. The large amount disbursed for interest and the reduction of the gold balance in the Treasury, as well as the condition of the market, have doubtless induced the moderate action of the Secretary, which, however, is changed only in amount, not in principle.

THE GOLD RING CONSPIRACY.

The Sub-Committee of the Banking and Currency Committee, consisting of Messrs. GARFIELD, COBURN and COX, who were appointed to investigate the New-York gold ring conspiracy, will meet in that City tomorrow, and proceed in the examination of witnesses under the orders of the House. They will endeavor to clear the examination this week.

THE STANTON FUND.

Senator CHANDLER, who has been absent in New-York and Philadelphia to urge measures for the fund for the family of Mr. STANTON, has returned, and reports gratifying success in both cities. There is every prospect that the object will be fully accomplished at a very early day.

MARINE HOSPITALS.

Among the important bills before the House Committee on Commerce is one in relation to the management of the Marine Hospitals, on which action will probably be had at an early period of the session. It appears that these establishments are conducted on a very loose system, and it is alleged that large sums of money are annually wasted in these establishments for want of proper supervision. A bill providing for their reorganization passed the Senate last session, but failed to receive the legislative sanction of the House. The measure in question provided for the appointment of an officer to take charge of all the Marine Hospitals, to be responsible to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the bill now before the House has a similar provision.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

It is the subject of comment that the New Year's receptions were not only more numerous, but that considerably less of spirituous liquors was furnished than heretofore, coffee and chocolate being substituted. The effect of this was seen in the good order everywhere prevalent, without a diminution of the general enjoyment.

THE FRENCH CABLE.

The French Cable Company have put out a vague card, which a careless reader may possibly take to be a denial of the statement in the President's Message that their concession contains the very objectionable feature of subjecting all messages to the scrutiny and control of the French Government. In reality it makes no such denial, nor could the Company deny the President's charge, since the sixth article of the concession is in the following language:

"The Government reserves to itself the right of establishing, at the expense of the Company, such control over the service of the line as it may judge convenient for this purpose. The service of the line shall have its office in one of the rooms belonging to the telegraph office of Brest, the chief of which shall be appointed by the Minister of the Interior. The clerks of the telegraph office of the State shall be indispensable intermediaries between the public and the agent of the concessionaires in the transmission of messages. The messages received by cable shall be immediately handed to them, and be delivered through their agency. The dispatches to be transmitted by the cable shall in like manner be lodged with them and handed by them to the agents of the concessionaires."

JANUARY GOLD SALES.

The Secretary of the Treasury has authorized the Assistant Treasurer at New-York to continue the sale of one million of gold and the purchase of one million of bonds on alternate weeks through the month of January on account of the Sinking Fund; also, to sell one million of gold and purchase two millions of bonds on alternate weeks, and alternating with the sales and purchases on account of the Sinking Fund, for the special fund. The result for the month is the sale of four millions of gold and the purchase of six millions bonds on both accounts. He has also authorized the Assistant Treasurer to anticipate the interest coupons, payable in sixty days from presentation, upon a rebate of interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum.

SOCIAL LIFE AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The President will hold his first public reception on Thursday, the 13th inst., between the hours of 8 and 10 P. M. Due notice of his subsequent receptions will be given through the Press. Mrs. GRANT'S receptions will commence on the 11th inst., and be held every Tuesday during the season, between the hours of 3 and 4 o'clock P. M.

Closer of the Holiday Recess—Reassembling of Congress—The War on Commissioner Wells—Some Facts for the Extreme Tariff Men to Consider—The Post Office Department and the Steamship Lines.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Jan. 1, 1870.

The holiday recess for the Departments closes to-night, and all those who have business pending are thankful. Not that the respite from labor is begrudged by any one to worthy clerks and officials, but that under the system of rigid economy now instituted some of the Bureaus are so short-handed that work is put behind-hand so far by the week of half-holiday, that much inconvenience and some injustice must result.

THE CONGRESSIONAL RECESS.

Congress, however, is more extravagant than the Departments. It takes a week longer, and its holiday is not reconsidered, either, by any necessity for relaxation. But I suppose it may be extenuated on the ground that the public business is not ready. When the hot days of July come they will wish that a little more labor had been accomplished earlier in the session. It is doubtful if any really necessary measure will be ready for action before the last of the present month. The Ways and Means will resume their sessions on Wednesday next, and go on with the tariff.

MR. WELLS' ANNUAL REPORT.

Agents of the Ways and Means I learn that it is the intention of some of the extreme protectionists on that Committee to insist on smothering the report of Special Commissioner WELLS. Their hostility is very bitter, but I think the House will scarcely permit it to take that shape. Several members of Congress have stated that they never had so many inquiries for any single document as for the last report. Anything can not supply the demand, because none have been ordered printed. Some of the extremists are even considering the expediency of driving the Commissioner from the Republican Party, and of arraying both the Administration and the party against his views. In view of this fact it may be well to look ahead and see what, in a political sense, would be the trend of such a course. Some indication of this may be found by observing the reception which the recent report of the Commissioner has experienced from the various leading Republican journals of the country, and the extent to which the Commissioner's proposals for reciprocity in the tariff have been accepted by them. An examination of the files of some of the leading journals of the country shows that the report and the views of the Special Commissioner in respect to tariff and internal revenue reforms have received a general but unmistakably favorable endorsement from the following Republican or semi-Republican papers: The Boston Journal, Boston Herald, Boston Commercial Bulletin; Springfield Republican; Hartford Courant; New-York TIMES, Post, Mail, Commercial Advertiser, Nation, Evening Post, Harper's Weekly; Albany Journal; Troy Times; Buffalo Commercial; Cincinnati Gazette, Commercial; Chicago Tribune; St. Louis Democrat. In addition to these the Democratic Press almost universally endorse the tariff views of the Commissioner, as do almost without exception the country Press of Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri and Minnesota. In all New-England, moreover, there is scarcely a single Republican paper that had spoken out squarely in opposition to the views of the Commissioner in respect to revenue reform. Now these facts are very significant, and indicate very clearly where the line in the Republican Party is to be drawn in case opposition to the tariff views of Mr. WELLS is to be made a party view. The best writers and thinkers, as well as nearly all the young blood of the country, are on the side of the Special Commissioner; and to provoke the active political opposition of this section of the party would no doubt entirely change the complexion of the next House of Representatives. It is well, therefore, to consider, in view of the free fight which is threatened over the Special Commissioner at the reassembling of Congress, who it is that is likely in the long run to come out ahead, and who, in the kicking out process, will most likely find themselves on the door-steps. If the high tariff advocates can stand this warfare, the Commissioner and his supporters certainly can.

THE OCEAN MAIL SERVICE.

There are one or two facts concerning the recent disagreement between the Post Office Department and the ocean steamship lines which deserve to be stated. It is true that the official notice of the rates of the new treaty was not served until the 23d December, but the companies, nevertheless, knew what those rates were. Mr. DAIN, of the Inman line, had, at his own request, been informed more than a month before what the new rate would be, if the treaty was concluded. He was spokesman, apparently, for the carrying lines, and they are quite as chargeable with delinquency in neglecting to inform the Department that they should refuse the mails at the proposed rates as the Department is in not having given them earlier notice. The Postmaster-General could grant no better terms, even if every ocean steamer afloat refused the mails. The action of the companies, if it had succeeded, would have had no other effect than to have caused the Government great additional expense, and to have prevented, for the time being, the establishment of cheap ocean postage. As to the statement of concert of action among the companies with the evident design of embarrassing the Department, it is said by the Postmaster-General that the letters declining the mails from the several lines are identical in language as well as object. This is the view taken at the Department, and these are some of the facts by which it is sustained. CYMON.

ALBANY.

The Forthcoming Legislature—The Governor's Message—Arrival of Members—The Contest for Speaker—Character of the New Legislature, Etc., Etc.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Sunday, Jan. 2, 1870.

For the first time, almost in a generation, the State Capitol is to witness, on Tuesday next, the assembling of a Legislature composed of a close working majority of Democrats in both Houses, headed up by a Governor and an entire Cabinet of State officers of the same political faith. There are Democrats who are well nigh intoxicated with this new and unaccustomed turn in the wheel of fortune, who proclaim it as the commencement of that great "reaction" which they have prophesied for so many years, and who are loud-mouthed in their demands that the Democracy shall signalize its advent to power by undoing pretty much all their opponents have done in the way of legislation for the past twenty years, and by rooting up and smashing things generally. But the wise men of the party are shrewd enough to understand that the restoration of the Democracy to power in this State at the last election was more accidental than intentional on the part of the people, and that the chances of a repetition of the accident next year are about the same as the probabilities that lightning will strike twice in one place. They know very well that the State of New-York is thoroughly and overwhelmingly Republican in sentiment, and that it was only through temporary divisions among their opponents in certain localities that they were enabled to carry either branch of the Legislature. Even their Governor holds his seat by a tenure which a large portion of the people believe to have no better foundation than successful frauds upon the ballot box and illegal naturalization papers. They are, therefore, inclined to counsel moderation in the measures to be pressed by the Democracy before the coming Legislature, and to leave behind them a record that shall conciliate the people and invigile them into again trusting them with power. Even in New-York City, where the loudest complaints are made against Republican legislation, it is doubtful whether the Democratic iconoclasts, who constitute the rank and file of the party, will be permitted to witness such a wholesale demolition of Republican idols—such a radical uprooting of "Radical" legislation—as they hope for, and have been led to expect. The New-York delegation are already divided as to the course to be pursued with regard to the much talked of Republican "Commissions" for that City. Some wish to abolish them altogether, others wish to abolish a portion and retain the rest; and if any or all are retained, they then disagree as to whether the heads of the Commissions shall be elected by the people, or appointed by the Governor, or the Mayor. They all find it a much easier thing to tear down than to build up. One thing, however, may be taken for granted: the Commissions will be so changed, or remodeled, as to throw into the hands of the Democracy (the Tammany Hall portion) all the patronage which they do not already possess.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor HOFFMAN has completed his message to the Legislature, which will be forwarded to New-York to-morrow night. It is a document of about the usual length as that of last year, and as the Governor is said to belong to the moderate class of Democrats, it will probably exhibit moderation in its recommendations. Having been Mayor of New-York, and as such a constant complainer of the restrictions of power and patronage now held by that office, he cannot be less than to stymie the Legislature, in remodeling the Government of the Metropolis, to invest the Mayoralty with largely increased authority, and to make the Chief Magistrate, in fact as it stands, the head of municipal government and responsible for its administration. He will recommend a modification of the Excise law to suit the Germans, who are under the delusion that he is one of their countrymen, and who, but for the name of HOFFMAN and the restrictions on lager, would be in danger of voting the Republican ticket. Reform in the management of the State Prisons and of the canals will be prominent features of the message, and economy and diminished taxes will be not much as a constant desideratum of the Democratic faith. No allusion will be made to the New-York Court House, and Democratic proclaim might be made to conflict with Democratic clamor. On the subject of annulling the ratification by the last Legislature of the Fifteenth Amendment, the Governor will maintain a discreet silence. He is too good a lawyer to believe that such a thing can be done, or that it would be worth doing, and he has too much sense to aid in making his party ridiculous.

ARRIVAL OF MEMBERS—THE SPEAKERSHIP.

A score or more members of the new Legislature are now here, but most of them will not arrive before to-morrow afternoon. The New-York delegation came up on a special train to-day; and are notable in their championship of the claims of HITCHMAN for Speaker. They are trying to create the impression that the thing is settled, and that there is really going to be no contest; but their early arrival on the ground, in order to capture and pulmonize the newspapers as soon as they make their appearance, shows that they anticipate more opposition than they produced. JACOBS, of Kings, is the most formidable, if not the only, rival of HITCHMAN for the post, and is said to have made a thorough canvass of the country members with, what he deems, a favorable result. Both candidates are backed by the unanimous vote of their county delegations, and the battle appears to be waged on the respective claims of New-York and Kings. The Brooklyn Democracy accuse New-York of wishing to gobble up everything, and they ask the rural Democrats to come to their rescue and make common cause with them against the Tammany man, lest at some future time they find themselves gobbled up. It is reported that Governor HOFFMAN, without taking sides for or against either candidate, would prefer that the Speaker should not be chosen from the New-York delegation. The contest will be held to-morrow evening, when the question will be decided one way or the other; and, whichever way, will make very little difference to the Republicans, as either candidate would make a very acceptable Speaker to them in their in

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

HISTORY OF AMERICAN SOCIALISMS. By JOHN HUMPHREY NOYES. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co. 1870.

Few books more interesting than this have been published in this country. Socialism, indeed, under its various names and shifting aspects, is one of the subjects that seem almost so attractive to those who sympathize with as to those who oppose it, and Mr. NOYES' history has the advantage of dealing in a vigorous and lucid style with what is itself of intrinsic interest. As some of our readers may not know, the author is the founder of the celebrated Oneida Community. He was born at Brattleboro, Vt., in 1811, went through an academical course, studied law and divinity at Andover and New-Haven; was greatly affected by what was known as the Finney Revival, in 1831; studied the Bible with much anxiety, which, with the instructions of teachers in whom he had confidence, "soon landed him in a new experience and new views of the way of salvation, which took the name of Perfectionism," in February, 1834. The next twelve years he passed in studying and teaching salvation from sin. Relatives and others who sympathized with his teachings gradually gathered around him. When the Fourier excitement arose, this infant community observed it from afar and read the Harbinger and the Present, and watched the movement with interest, but retained "their position as simple believers in Christianity," and steadfastly criticised Fourierism. They acknowledged receiving a great impulse from Brook Farm; and the Oneida Community, in Mr. NOYES' words, really issued from a conjunction between the revivalism of Orthodoxy and the socialism of Unitarianism. After the fire at Brook Farm and the subsequent breaking up of that community, the Oneida Society seems to have been ushered into strong and abiding life, and to have taken the first steps toward that flourishing material condition that distinguishes it at this day.

We mention these facts as preliminary to an examination of Mr. NOYES' book, chiefly because they throw strong light upon the spirit if not on the method of treatment of the author. The failure of other similar communities Mr. NOYES attributes to the absence of the religious element in their theory and practice: the success of the Oneida Community he attributes to the presence and recognition of that element. Undoubtedly the logic of facts to a certain extent is on his side, and it is natural he should give a favorable account of the society of which he was the parent and is still the chief. Mr. NOYES has been largely indebted, in the preparation of his history, to the hitherto unpublished collection of a Scotchman named A. J. MACDONALD, who intended to make a book much like the one in hand. MACDONALD was a printer and a disciple of OWEN's, who came to this country somewhere about 1840. In our author's words, "he gathered a huge mass of materials, wrote his preface and then died in New-York of the cholera." His manuscript described sixty-nine associative experiments, beginning with Brook Farm and ending with the Shakers, and contained notices of prominent Socialists, such as OWEN, FOURIER, FRANCES WRIGHT and others. Mr. NOYES has made use of these data, but there is plenty of evidence that, at least in a literary and intellectual point of view, he is much better fitted to be the historian of American Socialism than was MACDONALD.

The first definite and considerable Socialist experiment in this country was the celebrated one made under the auspices of ROBERT OWEN, at New-Harmony. There was a family of 900 souls, settled on a farm of 30,000 acres. The attempt failed, as did several smaller imitations of it. But the son of the projector, ROBERT DALE OWEN, and that remarkable woman, FRANCES WRIGHT, traveled up and down the country, speaking and writing and keeping alive the agitation. This was the first great wave of communism. The second came later, in 1843, when ALBERT BRISBANE appeared as what Mr. NOYES calls "a cosmopolitan apostle" of the Fourier movement, while the New-York Tribune was its organ. The two waves, or movements, called respectively by our author Owenism and Fourierism, are not, as he says, to be thought of as heterogeneous and separate. "Their partisans maintained theoretical opposition to each other; but, after all, the main idea of both was the enlargement of home—the extension of family union beyond the little man-and-wife circle to large corporations." However either or both may have failed, and whether that failure be temporary or permanent, their influence is still felt, and will continue to be felt.

"As a man who has passed through a series of passional excitements is never the same being afterward, so we insist that these socialistic paroxysms have changed the heart of the nation, and that a yearning toward social reconstruction has become a part of the continuous, permanent life of the American people. The communities and phalanxes died almost as soon as they were born, and are now almost forgotten. But the spirit of socialism remains in the life of the nation. It was discouraged and cast down by the failures of 1843 and 1847, and thus it learned salutary caution and self-control. But it lives still, as a hope watching for the morning, in thousands and perhaps millions who never took part in any of the experiments, and who are neither Owenites nor Fourierites, but simply socialists without theory—believers in the possibility of a scientific and heavenly reconstruction of society."

Mr. NOYES points out the difference between the Owenites and Fourierites—the Revivalists and Socialists—the Bible men and the Liberals or Infidels—with remarkable discrimination and vigor. It is difficult to convey an intelligible impression in a few paragraphs of what is given in many pages. We may say, however, that Mr. NOYES thinks the Revivalists and Socialists were, in truth, reciprocally necessary to each other, and that each failed for want of the knowledge of this fact and the practice that should have flowed from it. "The Revivalists failed for want of regeneration of society, and the Socialists failed for want of regeneration of the heart." The moan of MACDONALD was that, after seeing the stern reality of the experiments, he lost hope and was obliged to confess that he had "imagined mankind better than they are." This was the final confession of the leaders in the associative experiments generally, from OWEN to the last of the Fourierites; and this confession means that Socialism needed for its complement regeneration of the heart,—and behold, this is Revivalism!

As a practical corollary to the Socialistic problem, and also as a specimen of MACDONALD's manner, we quote his remarks on the failure of the experiment of OWEN, whose ardent disciple the Scotchman had ever been:

"Mr. Owen said he wanted honesty of purpose and he got dishonesty. He wanted temperance, and instead, he was continually troubled with the intemperate. He wanted industry, and he found idleness. He wanted chastity, and he found lust. He wanted carefulness, and he found waste. He wanted to find desire for knowledge, but he found apathy. He wanted the principles of the formation of character understood, and he found them misunderstood. He wanted a community of goods, and he found it not; and all the individuals of the community, but he could not find them; neither could he find those who were self-sacrificing and enduring enough to prepare and educate their children to possess these qualities. Thus it was proved that his principles were either entirely erroneous, or much in advance of the age in which he promulgated them. He seems to have forgotten that if one out of all the thousand persons assembled there had possessed the qualities which he wished them to possess, there would have been no necessity for his vain exertions or from a common

THE AMERICAN TURF.

Review of the Racing Season of 1869.

Prospects of the Turf in 1870—The New Race Courses at Long Branch and Baltimore —The Fashionable Sires of the Day.

A retrospective view of the racing season of the year just closed, and a dispassionate observation of the most prominent events which have distinguished it, may not be without interest to the turfman at the present time, the running of the past season exercising no little influence on that of the coming year. In the Northern States the turf has attained a higher degree of popularity than it ever before enjoyed, and it is patronized and supported by men of the highest social position, intellect and wealth. In the South, the injury which five years of civil war inflicted on the interests of the turf, is being steadily and rapidly repaired, and most of the popular racing meetings south of Mason and Dixon's line are again held, and before long, we shall see the Southern turf as prosperous as it was before the war. The number of thoroughbreds now running on the American turf is far greater than at any previous period, and we may with safety say that they are far superior in quality. Compared with former years, the amount of public money now given to be run for at the different race meetings is immeasurably greater, and owners of racing stock have a chance of securing a remunerative return for the capital invested in their stables in the purses and stakes they may win, in addition to the pleasure they derive from the indulgence of their tastes in "the sport of Kings." At the Jerome Park Spring and Fall Meetings, we find the American Jockey Club giving in added money over $22,000 to be run for, while Saratoga, at its one Summer meeting, contributes more than $13,000 to promote the enjoyment of the visitors. At the approaching Spring Meeting of the Buckeye Club, of Cincinnati, the princely amount of $12,000 is given for ten races, and even this large sum will be increased at the Fall Meeting. And here we may observe that a broader spirit of liberality pervades the Western and Southern turf associations than the similar racing associations of Saratoga and Jerome Park, the former not charging any percentage for entries in purses, while the latter mulct the owners of horses who contribute to the sport and success of their meetings, of five per cent. of the whole amount of the purses entered for. It is to be hoped that this petty tax, which realizes only an insignificant amount in the aggregate, utterly unworthy the attention of the rich associations above named, will soon be abolished.

The racing season of 1869 commenced with the Magnolia Jockey Club meeting at Mobile on March 23. The star of Captain MOORE'S stable was in the ascendant, for he won both the mile-heat races for two-year olds with Cottrill, a magnificent looking and speedy son of Daniel Boone; both the three-year-old stakes, mile heats and two-mile heats, with Bayonet; the two-mile heat purse with Pizzaleer, a walk over, and the three-mile heat race with the same horse; and two other races with the "gallant gray," Stonewall Jackson. Another daughter of Daniel Boone, named Jennie C., won the sweepstakes for all ages after a capital race of six heats. The Metairie Jockey Club, at New-Orleans, commenced their meeting on April 3, and it was one of remarkable brilliance. Captain MOORE was again successful with Cottrill, who beat Mr. O'FALLON'S flying filly Alice Vela for the two-year race, a dash of a mile, with such ease as stamped him one of the best colts of his year. The race for the great Metairie Stake, two-mile heats, $1,000 each, play or pay, with $1,000 added, was productive of unusual interest. In the first heat Bayonet came home a length ahead, but a frivolous objection that he had swerved against Gilroy was entertained by the judges, and they, allowing their judgment to be swayed by personal prejudice and popular clamor, distanced Bayonet and gave the heat to Gilroy. The next two heats and race were won by Plantagenet, who beat Gilroy with great ease. Locust Post, a son of Young Melbourne, won the mile-heat race for three-year olds from Sprague, and Privateer won the four-mile heat race. The mile heat race for two-year olds produced a splendid contest between Cottrill and Alice Vela, the former winning in two heats in the fast time of 1:46½, 1:46¼, with ninety pounds up. Trouvill won the two-mile hurdle race, over eight hurdles, in 3:59¼, the fastest time on record for such a race. Banshee beat Gilroy and General Buell in a two-mile dash, and Bayonet, who had been unjustly deprived of the honors of victory in the Metairie Stake race, beat Plantagenet and Locust Post with perfect ease in the three-mile heat race; time, 5:21, 5:23. The Memphis Meeting commenced April 20, but the only events worth noting were the double victories of Ontario, a daughter of imported Bonnie Scotland, and of Little Mack, by imported Eclipse, who has redeemed the stock of the latter from the imputation of being non-stayers, for no distance seems too far for him. The Nashville Meeting commenced on May 4. Riot, the first of the famous Rhinodyne's stock that has been out, winning his maiden race of mile heats in excellent time. The Cumberland Stake, No. 1, introduced us to Harong and Versailles, two promising three-year olds by Vandal; the former commenced that brilliant career which was only interrupted by his death six months later, by winning the race in two heats in 1:46½, 1:46¼, which is very fast time on the Nashville Course. The week after, Harong came out at the Louisville Meeting, and won the mile-heat race for three-year olds; Overland and Ontario being respectively successful in the two-mile heat and mile heat races. Exactly a week later, Harong met with his first and only defeat in the Phoenix Stake at Lexington, Ky., where he was beaten by Pompey Pagne in 1:47, 1:44½. Overland pursued his victorious career here by winning two races at two-mile heats and three-mile heats in good company, and Exchange gave evidence of that racing merit which his subsequent running confirmed, by winning the Green Stakes for three-year olds in four heats, in 1:48, 1:44¾, 1:46, 1:50. But the most interesting event of the meeting was the meeting of Vandal's two renowned sons, Pompey Pagne and Versailles with Dublin, (since renamed Helmbold,) in the Citizens' Stakes, two-mile heats, for three-year olds. Pompey Pagne was the favorite at two to one, and after he won the first heat in 3:39¾, much longer odds were laid on him. Dublin won the second heat in 3:48¾, and Versailles the third and fourth heats and the race, Dublin being second in both. It was shortly after this race that both Pompey Pagne and Dublin became the property of Mr. W. R. BABCOCK, of this City.

The venue of sport now changes from the West to the East, and at Paterson, N. J., we find a Spring Meeting inaugurated on the 16th May, over the old course once so popular with New-Yorkers, when under the management of the Passaic Association. The meeting lasted three days, but the only memorable event was the defeat of Richard B. Connolly by Reuse in a race of mile heats. Connolly won the first heat so handily that little is thought of it, and in his winning the race, Red Mokrine showed that the long rest he had enjoyed had restored to him the great burst of speed he had once possessed, and he won the next two heats with apparent ease. One week later and we find the Idlewild Course in progress over the Rockaway Course at Cincinnati, and Harong in the stakes for three-year olds, mile heats, which he won in two heats, the fastest time at the distance on record up to that date, and blotting out Lexington's time made over the same track, which for four years had stood at the head of the fast-time record. Crossland won the two-mile heat race for all ages, in 3:39, 3:34¼, and Jerome beat Lexington a mile and a half in 2:46¾, and then won the mile heat race the following day. Tom Foster, a son of Lightning, showed that he inherited his sire's game endurance, by winning a race of mile heats which required seven heats to decide it.

Returning East once more, we find the Summer meeting of the American Jockey Club at Jerome Park commencing on the 8th June. The match day preceded the regular meetings being held on the 3d June. Of the four matches, two only are worthy of note here. The first was for $5,000 a-side, half forfeit, between Mr. GAMBRON'S Miss Allice, by Lexington, out of the imported mare Jenny Lind, and Messrs. Dunnigan and CRAWFURD'S colt, by Consternation out of The Wonder. Both were two-year olds, and the first of the produce of their respective sires that had appeared in public. Before the race it was mutually agreed to run for the forfeit money only, $2,500 a side,) instead of the larger stake originally named. Miss Allice won easily, and was backed against another of Gambron's stock, a filly out of Peale, belonging to Messrs. DENNISON and CRAWFURD, for $2,500 a side, to run at the ensuing Jerome Meeting. Unfortunately for Mr. GAMBRON, she met with a fatal accident the day before the match was to be run, while at exercise over the old course at Saratoga. She was a beautiful and most promising filly, and her experienced trainer, Mr. CHAS. LLOYD, has always declared that she was the fastest and gamest two-year old he ever had in his hands. The favorable indorsement which this filly gave of Lexington's merits as a racing sire, has been subsequently confirmed by the running of Lapidist, Lillielaw, Enquirer and Anna Mac. The other match was between Mr. BELMONT'S three-year old colt Glenelg, by Glenelg, out of Regina, by Kingston, and Mr. JAMESON'S filly Reform, by Lapidist, dam Parachute, by Yorkshire, for $1,000 a side, Glenelg winning with such commanding ease that it was at once apparent Mr. BELMONT had both the Belmont Stakes and Travers Stakes at his mercy. Among the most noticeable events of the regular meeting here were the victories of the Wade Tie colt (since named Comfort) in the Fordham Stakes, beating General Duke, (second,) Metaric, (third,) Corsican, Jubal, Dagonetter, La Polka and others; of Pontoon, in the Stockbridge Stakes, where his stable companion, Glenelg, was second, and Metaric fourth; of Wanderer, and of Ottawa, probably the oldest horse on the turf in training, on the Members' Cup race. Jesse Mee showed her high quality by beating the since invincible Remorseless in Two-Year-Old Stakes, and Kate Dale, thanks to the heavy betting which just landed him, placed the mile heat race to Colonel McDANIEL'S credit, beating E. D. Connolly, (who won the first heat) Vauxhall, Corsican, Videy, Alice Vela and Metaric. Spunkie won the Westchester Cup for that year, as American Surfman, Mr. O'FALLON, beating Pleasureville, General Duke, Lecal and Abdel Kader. Vespucius, by Planet, out of Columbia, gave Messrs. FURDY and WITHERS a foretaste of the success in store for them in the Fall, by winning the three-year-old purse from a large field of horses, after having three respectable sec chance by bolting. Mr. BELMONT'S great favorite still attended him in the Hopeful Stakes, which he won with his latest acquisition, the filly Nettie James, by Doliver, the winner of the Goodwood Cup, out of Fleur des Champs, by Newminster, from a field of twelve runners. Under the impression that the filly was only very moderate, Mr. BELMONT did not wish his trainer, JACOB PIDGEON, to start her for this race, but the latter, from his own observation of some of the youngsters engaged in the race, persuaded that gentleman to run her, and the rich stake was the result. Among the beaten ones were Remorseless, Polly Lyons, Miss Allee, Lady Peg, and other good ones. Tammany placed the "Juvenile" Stake to Mr. FURDY'S credit, but the prominence which had already this performance has not been realized. Vauxhall won the Metropolitan Stakes, two mile heats, and upset a tremendous pot on Pleasureville, who became such a favorite after winning the first heat, that she had to be virtually held up to him. The Jockey Club handicap, two-mile dash, was remarkable for producing a dead heat between Plantagenet and Abdel Kader, after a most brilliant contest throughout; time, 3:42. The deciding heat was won by Plantagenet in 3:42, after a magnificent race throughout the two miles. General Duke won the Consolation, Four-Year-Old Stakes, and Videy and General Yorke beat Banshee, Flora Mather, Bonissonne and old Flesherg in the three-mile race. This was Flesherg's last race on the turf, on which his career has been brilliant and successful. He is by imported Bulrowski, and, except Ottawa, he is the oldest horse at the head of his property. In the last race of the meeting, a sweepstakes for two-year olds, Remorseless commenced that uninterrupted course of success which has distinguished his career up to the present time, by beating Mr. BELMONT'S filly Lady Love with great ease. This race terminated the Spring meeting of the American Jockey Club at Jerome Park.

COLONIAL ENGLAND.

Earl Granville on the Policy of the Mother Country Toward Her Possessions—Circular to Colonial Governments.

On Dec. 15, the deputation whose discussions of the subject of the relations existing between Great Britain and her colonies have been already referred to here, were received by Earl GRANVILLE. After reviewing the situation, Earl GRANVILLE thus referred to the future: "Any one who has observed the astounding progress of some of the Colonies during the last twenty years in wealth, population, statesmanship and intelligence, in everything which constitutes a great community, must feel it difficult to prophecy as to the future. I should be exceedingly sorry to see England deprived of all her colonies, but this country will never attempt to retain them by brute force; but I believe, however, that the bonds which unite us, though slender, are elastic and much stronger than some suppose. I doubt whether any attempt to define our relations more strictly would have a strengthening effect. I believe, and, with, not withstanding occasional differences, live happily together who could not do so if they had called in a lawyer to define how much each was to yield on every occasion, and what the terms of a possible separation should be. It is with regret that I find myself unable, for the reasons I have I be given, to take a fresh initiative in a plan which seems already to have collapsed, and I have only to thank the deputation for the courteous attention with which they have listened to me."

The following is a copy of a letter sent by Lord GRANVILLE to each of the colonies of those bodies which the letter of Messrs. YOUL, BLAINE and SEWELL, of the 15th of August, had been addressed:

DOWNING-STREET, Sept. 8, 1869.

SIR: I have received a copy of a letter purporting to be addressed on behalf of a Committee appointed by a meeting of influential colonists to the Colonial Secretaries or Governments of New South Wales, South Australia, New-Zealand, Tasmania, Victoria, Queensland, Canada, Cape of Good Hope, Natal, and Mauritius.

This letter appears to be prompted by a discussion which took place in the House of Commons, and with the present mode of administering colonial affairs; and, as a means of effecting such changes as may appear desirable, it suggests a conference in London of colonial representatives duly authorized by their respective Governments.

It is not necessary for me to point out to you in what respects the description given in the letter of the present policy of Her Majesty's Government is inaccurate.

With regard to the practical suggestion which it conveys, Her Majesty's Government, while ready at any time to consider from the practical point of view matters affecting Imperial interests, will always be most anxious to ascertain and ready to consider the wishes and interests of the colonies of the British Empire. They have no jealousy of the collective action of any of the colonies in furtherance of their wishes and interests. On the contrary, they have every desire to encourage such combined action. Nor should I have thought it necessary to make any observation on the present proposal, had it not been officially communicated to myself as Secretary of State and to the Governments concerned.

With the exception of the three gentlemen who signed the letter, I do not know who were present at the meeting held in the rooms of the Royal Colonial Society, or the names of the Committee who have issued this circular. I am unable, therefore, to estimate the weight which your Administrators will attach to their recommendations. Independently, however, of the considerations that the project assumes at its outset an attitude of antagonism to Her Majesty's Government, my opinion is that it is not in itself calculated to answer its purpose.

In the first place, the attempt to cover by one arrangement all the principal colonies enjoying representative institutions appears to me injudicious. The questions which most seriously affect individual colonies in relation to the mother country have often in their nature and treatment no slight analogy with those which arise in others, nor, so far as I am aware, is there any thing in the mode of transacting business between the British and Colonial Governments which, under their generally cordial relations, obstructs negotiation, or calls for any practical improvement in their means of communication.

As a general rule, it appears to me that the wishes of the colonists are likely to be more faithfully and effectually brought before the Home Government by the local Ministers, who are in immediate contact with the opinion which they represent, and through the Governor, who is responsible to Her Majesty for furnishing all possible information, than by a body of gentlemen resident in London, acting in pursuance of their own views, or of some written instructions, under influences not always identical with those which are paramount in the colony, and without the guarantee which their recommendation may derive from having passed through the Executive Government.

It will be obvious to you that these objections do a standing representation of the Colonial Empire in London have no relation to the appointment of several or collective agencies on the system now in force, which, I believe, completely answers its purpose.

You will communicate this dispatch to your Government. I have, &c., GRANVILLE.

The Robbery of the Schoharie County National Bank—Everything of Value Taken.

From the Schoharie Republican, Dec. 23.

Great excitement was created in this village this (Wednesday) morning, by the discovery, on opening the Schoharie County National Bank, that burglars had been at work the night before, and had succeeded in obtaining an entrance to the bank and appropriating and carrying away everything of value therein. By appearances the burglars must have obtained an entrance by prying open the iron shutters on one of the windows in the rear of the building. Once in, it was easy work for them to force down the brick wall inclosing the safe, which they did effectually, scattering bricks and mortar in every direction. The safe was then blown open, and of course everything of value found taken away. Books and papers were scattered around, and everything appears to have had general overhauling.

The loss to the bank is $4,100 in money. The damage to the building, safe, &c., will probably be about $1,000 more. We understand that a large amount of money had been sent to Albany a day or two since, and that the officers of the bank had some of the funds in their possession which will account for the comparatively small loss in money. A large amount of bonds owned by private parties (among whom, we learn, were Mr. Sabinus, of Middleburgh, and Mr. GEO. BARD, of this village,) were taken, but we were unable to learn the amount. As the bank was not opened until about 9 o'clock in the morning, the burglars had plenty of time to be far away before the robbery was discovered.

TRICHINIASIS.

Appearance of the Disease in DeKalb County, Ill.—Three Victims Already Dead and Others Likely to Die.

Correspondence of the Chicago Republican.

MARENGO, Dec. 20.

The surrounding neighborhood is suffering from extreme excitement regarding the appearance of no less than ten cases of trichiniasis, which are likely to terminate fatally. The circumstances are as follows: About ten miles south of this town, in DeKalb, are the following persons, working on Mr. MALONEY'S farm: Mr. GROVINS, wife and two little girls aged respectively 9 and 7 years. With them lived a man named FITZMARTIN, with his mother, a lady about 60 years of age, his grandmother, aged 75 years, wife and one little girl. They are all Hollanders. Besides them is a driver named COWLES who occasionally takes his meals with the two families. It appears that about three weeks ago they were shipping hogs, and observing one old hog very sick, killed it, and, finding it unmalable, to satisfactorily fatten, they killed him and converted him into sausage sausage which, it as uncooked state, became the staple of food. About three or four days after first eating of this raw animal, the two little girls of Mr. GROVINS were taken sick with what the parents were informed was in the head and bowels, fever and depression. Dr. GREEN was sent for to this town, and drove over; the families being Hollanders, and speaking had English, the Doctor was scarcely able to understand a word of explanation; but from his own observation he pronounced one of the diseases was of ordinary nature of scarlet fever, and treated it accordingly, but the little patients grew rapidly worse and were soon beyond the reach of pain.

The family were all this time still eating out of the unlucky sausage, quite raw, and GROVINS, Mr. Maloney, and finally the body immediately, and finding it stiff and cold, allowed it to remain until a jury was summoned by the Coroner, and it was then taken down and placed on a mattress in the hall, to await the disposition of the family, who had been notified of the occurrence by telegraph.

That McGUIRE premeditated the suicide there can be no doubt, for his arrangements were made in the most deliberate manner. He obtained some hemp, which some of the prisoners are employed upon, also a piece of rope, some waxed twine, and a knife. With the twine and hemp he made a three-strand rope, twisting it very firmly together and splicing one end of it so as to form a loop; in this loop he fixed the bit of rope, which he formed into a noose; this allowed the hemp rope to slide easily. The other end of the rope was also spliced with a smaller loop, by which it was attached to the broom handle. In order to make the rope stronger, he bound it with waxed twine; the rope and noose thus made were also firmly bound to the broom handle with the same waxed thread. Then with bits of wood he fixed the broom handle in the lock of the cell. This opening is only the size of the end of a brick, and the broom handle was firmly wedged into it. McGUIRE then, standing on his water pail, must have fastened the noose around his neck, and, kicking away the pail, must immediately have fallen a short six inches from the cell floor. On the floor by the side of the body was a shirt sleeve, twisted and tied into knots, which was probably bound round the foot, and had slipped off. He was partially undressed, his shoes and stockings and coat being off. He apparently died very easy, his feet being drawn somewhat straight by his sides, his head turned on one side, the face calm, and the mouth and eyes closed; the limbs hung naturally, and not a vestige of a struggle could be detected.

A LETTER TO HIS FRIENDS.

The following letter was found open, without any direction, on a chest in McGUIRE'S cell:

Oh, my God! I am so grieved to think that I sent my wife to my mother's house and I to be the cause of her trouble and sorrow. I feel this day of what I done to my friends, as my grandfather, I can't think of what I done to the house, as his mother said.

PLEAS I to forgive. Dear Mother, you get the three hundred Dollars from R. D. Hunman, and one fifty from S. F. Jones and what money of mine will fire get; he gave me $20 dollars of it. I want it all to go to my children. Dear Mother, I want you and GARITY to be in good friends, for he never wanted me to do taken, nor I will not taken them! I get ready to die.

The above was written in ink and the balance with lead pencil.

I want my wife to know she was true, and it was for her sake and loyalty that we were united, & for the same my heart shall beat and not I the wife of Dan.

I have some money to pay, says the last time, dont know how much, for I MARTIN MCGUIRE am sick.

I dont want my children to go to an Asylum while the money stands, and when anything is done let them be put with some good Christian family, for I know Thomas will see to them. I hope what furniture & estate it make that is not GARITY. MARTIN MCGUIRE.

I want to make sale of or GARITY to allow for them because he said claim my things for he gave nothing he let his daughter go to her own. She was only 18 months in the family; what I have. MARTIN MCGUIRE.

A few days since he informed Mr. FREE, the jailer, that he thought it would best for him to take all his money back from his counsel, as they could not help his case much, and if would be better for his friends to obtain it. The letter he left shows that he was of the same mind when he wrote it. The brother of McGUIRE came from Meriden this morning, and procured a handsome rosewood coffin, in which the remains were inclosed and taken to Meriden this noon for burial.

M'GUIRE'S CRIME.

McGuire's crime and arrest are still fresh in the memory of our readers; but we will give a brief synopsis of the sad affair. On Sunday morning, Aug. 22, McGUIRE, who had been living unpleasantly with his wife, suddenly got up from his seat at the breakfast table, and seizing his wife by the hair, cut her throat, inflicting horrible wounds, of which she died on the following Wednesday afternoon. McGUIRE walked deliberately away immediately after the deed, and though closely pursued, was not arrested until Friday, the 27th. During the week he had wandered from place to place, and at last came back to his own house, in the middle of the night, and was found secreted in the cellar. He was brought before the Police Court on the 4th of September, and after a preliminary examination, was bound over for trial before the Superior Court. At the September term of that Court he was arraigned before the Grand Jury and a true bill brought against him. During his examination he has conducted himself at times in such a manner as to leave hardly a doubt of his being insane, and it is probable that in one of those fits he committed suicide.

The Twenty-sixth Senatorial District.

From the Rochester Democrat.

Returns from the Senatorial election in the Twenty-sixth District show the election of ABRAHAM V. HAMMERSLEY, the Republican candidate, by a majority of several hundred votes. Though this result is not at all surprising to us, it is a great disappointment to the Democracy. They cherished the hope that, by extraordinary vigilance, they would be able to win. Attempts were made to sow dissensions in the Republican ranks, and it was hoped that the Labor party, of recently produced, together with the falling off of twenty-seven attending a special election, combined with the feeling of security usually indulged by the dominant party, would conspire to keep enough Republicans from the polls to enable their adversaries to snatch the victory from their grasp. But these hopes have come to nothing, and the good men and true of the twenty-sixth District have again triumphed by sending the Republican nominee to the Senate. The District will be represented in the Senate by a man in every way worthy to represent it.

Labor in the South—Hiring Hands—Terms.

From the Mobile (Ala.) Telegraph, Dec. 23.

It is remarked that not one-tenth the number of field hands are seen upon the streets this Christmas as were any former one the war. Many are far last review. They are getting more settled, and finding out that yearly changes from one plantation to another do not pay. Thousands of them are becoming landholders upon a small scale—that is, proprietors are giving each head of a family some one or three acres of ground upon which they have erected a house, whose, &c., and are cultivating gardens, raising poultry, hogs, &c. All seem have no sort of disposition to move and hunt other places. By this wise policy the planters are obtaining leases upon which to make satisfactory arrangements, so that we do not hear of any dissatisfaction. This is the plan Horace Greeley proposes for a thousand years in England. It is in its germ here, but will eventually take that course.

The prices paid for hands are five for women one men, $10 for number two, $60 for women, and in that proportion for half-crown boys. It continues upon shares one-third of the crop is given to the freedmen.

In this connection it may be remarked that, as a general rule, men who deal justly with them have little trouble obtaining a full supply. Every available hand in Georgia is in requisition. Work can be obtained without the long difficulty from honorable men who will comply faithfully with all their engagements.

CUSTOM HOUSE REFORMS.

The Cartage Business—New Rules and Regulations.

The cartage business of the New-York Custom House for years has been a source of annoyance to the Collectors of the Port. During the administration of Collector SHUTES trouble arising from mismanagement of the cartage business became notorious, was the subject of Congressional investigation and newspaper comment. The passenger arising from the transportation of goods from steamers to bonded warehouses alone is immense and the amount paid annually reaches the hundred thousand dollar column. Merchants and other having business with the Custom House have had frequent cause of complaint, accustomed by delays and gravel information of the point of persons who have had charge of the transportation of dutiable goods from one place to another; therefore the carmen and the employes of contractors in this branch of the Customs service were men of mixed politics and morals. There was a lack of anything like order or discipline in that department, and to inaugurate a uniform system is even evidently much needed. Collector GRINNELL determined to recognize the matter best now, and to place in charge a responsible person who should direct the affairs in the cartage service. General Superintendent MANTON, of Boston, has been in the city for a month, and, with the assistance of business men, the manifest defects of the system along the line of the road, he have been detected in the matter. Carmen have been detected in various delays, and packages have been changed while in transportation between vessels and the bonded warehouses. As an instance, in the place of a box of superior silk goods a case marked and numbered in a similar fashion, but containing cheap goods, would be substituted. Labor to the Appraiser's store. There a duty fixed upon the sample case, and the whole lot, perhaps a thousand cases, would be entered at a very low rate, and then the government would be defrauded of thousands of dollars. Under the new regime there are to be eight carmen employed, and the contractors are to be manned, besides a score of inspectors and assistants. The programme for the disposal of the property mentioned to lose than five great sales, the last one to take place about the 1st of July.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Methodist Clergyman.

There is a certain mystery hanging about the conduct and disappearance of Rev. Mr. FRANCIS, a Methodist clergyman of West Hampton, L. I. On Tuesday, last week, in seeming good health, he left his home for Merchen, and after purchasing a large trunk at that place, received a letter and money of a friend, for the purpose of returning home, which he did. Wednesday he sent his wife to Merchen with the horse, promising to come down after her in the evening. Thursday morning, he, not having arrived, and his wife feeling worried, she started towards home on foot, expecting to meet him, but she did not, and walked the entire distance, eight miles, alone. On arriving home she found everything in great disorder and confusion, trunk and drawers emptied about the room, and all their valuables missing. During the day a messenger arrived from Riverhead, stating that Rev. Mr. FRANCIS wished him to say to his wife that he had received a letter from home, saying that his father was dead, and that he was off for Albany, and she must not be alarmed, and that he would return soon. On inquiry it was ascertained that no such message had been received at the telegraph office in Riverhead for him, and also that Mr. FRANCIS had left on the morning train for New-York. It is reported that his trunks to Boston. The supposition is that he is deranged. It is reported that he has before suffered from aberration of the mind, and that his mother's family had been similarly afflicted.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The French Cabinet is not authoritatively announced, but is forecast in the official paper of M. OLLIVIER, La Liberté. Of the Ministry thus given, four of the members are Senators, and six are members of the Chamber of Deputies. The Emperor, on Saturday, received the diplomatic corps, and in replying to the usual address, said that the presence of all the foreign representatives was a proof of the amicable relations existing between the Governments they represented and France....The Imparcial, of Madrid, states that the recent contradiction of the reported friendliness between the adherents of the Duke of MONTPENSIER and of the Prince of ASTURIAS is only applicable to certain individuals, and not to the whole party....The London journals continue to comment on the correspondence relating to the Alabama claims. The Spectator says that the diplomatic correspondence of Secretary FISH is an improvement on that of ex-Secretary SEWARD, yet complains that it does not sufficiently incline itself to the legal views of the case.

GENERAL.

The rain storm of yesterday extended eastward as far as Bangor, Me., and in Boston took the form of a drenching southeasterly storm. The effect of the heavy easterly gale of yesterday is mainly perceptible in the dearth of telegraphic news, the consequence of a very general prostration of the telegraph lines communicating with this City. In this vicinity, the damage, so far as known at the time of going to press, consisted of the blowing down of trees. Later reports say that the Hudson River Railroad track, from Hoy Hook to Peekskill drawbridge, was washed away, and that a hundred feet between Garrison's and Fort Montgomery is gone.

The quarrel between Governor WARMOTH, of Louisiana, and some of the New-Orleans city officers still continues. Auditor WICKLIFFE is not yet in possession of his office in Mechanics' Institute, the Governor and the Metropolitan Police being yet in possession. The Chief of Police has been committed to prison for contempt of Court in allowing the Governor to use the Police contrary to orders.

The latest reports from Louisville, Ky., are that GEORGE D. PRENTICE is gradually recovering, and is now considered out of danger.

A man named V. W. BUCKHOUT committed a terrible crime on the first day of the year, in the village of Sleepy Hollow, near Tarrytown. He shot and killed his wife and one CHAS. RANDALL; and shot and seriously, perhaps fatally, wounded ALFRED RANDALL, the father of the latter. Immediately after the occurrence he gave himself up.

The colored people in various parts of the South observed the anniversary of the issuing of the Emancipation Proclamation on the 1st inst. At Nashville they organized themselves into a convention, at which 2,500 persons were present. Resolutions were adopted expressing, among other sentiments, their grateful remembrance of the late President LINCOLN for their freedom, and their appreciation of recent acts of Congress, and of Mr. KELLEY's resolution regarding the reconstruction of Tennessee, which they deem necessary to their security, both as to life and property.

The Taxes and the Debt.

The cry still is, REDUCE THE TAXES! The leading class is literally a unit in favor of reduction. The farmers are semi-silent, by falling prices, to pay for it as a necessity absolutely necessary. The mechanics and laborers, who bore the hardships of high prices without a murmur while they were incident to a great national struggle, protest against that continuance of high prices which proceeds from exorbitant taxation. On no other subject are the people half so united or half so decided. They complain of the taxes as a burden beyond their strength. They know that much of the depression which affects industry, and much of the bitterness and peril of the trial which every branch of trade endures, grow out of the present system of taxation. We are sustaining the fiscal strain of war in a period of peace. We are paying the penalties of war years after the necessity for their exaction ceased. Hence the depth and universality of the demand for relief. East and West, North and South, insist upon it as a measure of justice and expediency—of justice, because this rate of taxation is in excess of the legitimate requirements of the Government; of expediency, because a diminution of the load is essential to the safety of great and varied interests, entering into the sum of national prosperity. The journals which oppose the demand are for the most part advocates of monopoly; they would withhold relief from the people for the aggrandisement of special interests and the promotion of a policy that would precipitate resumption of specie payments at any cost.

The mistake of Mr. BOUTWELL's policy is that it aims at concentrating effort upon the reduction of debt long in advance of its maturity, regardless of the suffering and loss which that effort entails upon commerce and industry. It is persisted in, moreover, with strange indifference to the fact that the nearer we approach resumption the heavier existing burdens become, and that if resumption were effected the collection of these burdens would be simply impossible. Values are falling, but taxes remain the same. The farmer receives less for his products, the merchant less for his goods, the workman less for his labor, while the exactions of the Government continue unabated. Supposing specie payments to be restored without previous reform in the matter of taxation, the result would virtually be an increase of taxation;—for though the rate remained the same, the available means of the taxpayers would be reduced. The effect of such a condition of things cannot be doubted. Such taxes in such circumstances could not be collected. There would be a falling off in the revenue at a time when its prompt and full collection would be of the highest importance to the credit of the Government.

It is not more certain that a return to specie payments is a work of years than that its accomplishment must be preceded by a large, well-considered, and eminently just reduction of the taxes. No prudent financier dreams of hurrying resumption. Charlatans may talk of its feasibility, and interested classes will, for reasons of their own, foster the delusion; but practical persons, who have studied the experience of other countries, and know the difficulties which beset the trade and industry of the United States, are content to await the influence of time upon the national resources, and the operation of natural laws upon all the elements of productive wealth. Theories are worthless in such a case as this. Departmental or legislative declarations in favor of immediate resumption are mere legerdemain. The thing cannot be hastened without imperilling vast interests. But it may be facilitated by thrift and prudence on the part of the Government and the country may be prepared for its action by lightening the load of taxation. The Secretary of the Treasury fails to comprehend the column of public opinion if he imagines that the story of what he is doing with the debt will reconcile the people to the burdens he would perpetuate. They see in earnest in the cry for reduction of taxes. And if there is not to be reduction, large and immediate, the country will hold a Republican Administration and a Republican Congress responsible.

Our Inland Commerce—Diversion of Trade and the Remedy.

Now that the Democrats are about to come into unchecked control of affairs at Albany, it becomes a matter of interest to commercial men to know what policy they will pursue with reference to the Erie Canal—that life-giving artery of our internal commerce. It is a problem in which the City of New-York is specially interested, in view of the rapid diversion of business to other points, north and south, which is said to be going on. We are aware that many of our commercial men have been accustomed to regard this alleged diversion with incredulity, and even derision; but current evidence not to be disputed shows it to be a fact which threatens ere long to produce serious results.

The official records at Albany prove that the net receipts of tolls for the current calendar year fall short of the net receipts of 1869 about $700,000. This amount, at existing rates of tolls, indicates a diminution of trade as compared with last year equivalent to 10,500,000 bushels of wheat, or a corresponding amount of other produce. It is reasonably safe to assume that the major part of this deficiency is a diversion from New-York to other points. The total receipts of wheat and flour at Chicago, Milwaukee, Toledo, Detroit and Cleveland for the season of navigation just closed were equivalent to 117,000,000 bushels, which is largely in excess of the receipts from all sources at New-York. The figures show a very considerable diversion to Montreal, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore—a diversion nearly or quite equal to that indicated by the above-named deficiency in tolls. Here is a problem for the commercial men of our City to ponder and seek to solve. How can such a diversion of trade be prevented?

We think that it can only be done by the adoption of a canal policy by the State of New-York, which will speedily secure not only adequate but cheap canal transportation, so that the grain products of the West can reach the markets of the world and compete with the grain of all other countries in price, at the same time yielding to the producer an adequate compensation. The question of cost of transportation has become so vitally important as that of the capacity of our canal, and can only be solved by an ultimate reduction of tolls to a minimum which will barely pay for the maintenance and operation of the Erie Canal. To effect this we must either liquidate the existing canal debt of the State with the current receipts of tolls—which with our present management would be a slow and tedious process—or we must pay it by direct taxation. Governor SEYMOUR declared in his annual message to the Legislature, Jan. 1, 1869, that "it would be better to abolish all tolls, and tax the people to pay the canal debt, than to lose the trade." We have no doubt as to the correctness of his proposition; but taxation is always unpopular, and there are many sanguine financiers who consider such an expedient to be unnecessary, believing that, with proper management, the Erie Canal can be made to pay off its debt, even with reduced tolls, and in time become practically a free avenue of commerce.

Careful estimates require about $13,000,000 to enlarge the present Trunk Canal to a capacity sufficient to pass boats of 600 tons, and to double all the locks. At one time it was a favorite scheme of the most ardent friends of the canal to do this, and they would scarcely listen to any other plan. The burden of debt and taxation, however, which has resulted from the war, has convinced even the most enthusiastic that so large an expenditure is inexpedient, for the present at least, and has turned their attention to a more moderate and temporary expedient. It is now very generally conceded that an immediate and judicious expenditure of about $3,000,000 would double the present capacity of the Erie Canal, and render it amply adequate for the demands of the next five or ten years. Its capacity has been gradually lessened by the caving of the bench walls, and the interested neglect of contractors under the existing system of repairs, until, as State Engineer RICHMOND said in his last annual report, "there is less capacity now than there was in 1869, and double the business to perform."

It will be seen, therefore, that the necessity is growing more and more pressing for an immediate expenditure to bring the canal up to the absolute existing requirements of trade. But we are met at the very outset of every attempt to secure such an expenditure by constitutional difficulties which lie in the way. The seventh article of the Constitution of the State not only specifically pledges the future revenues of the canal to the payment of the canal debt, but it forbids the contracting of any new debt by the State unless by an act of the Legislature, to be submitted to the people and approved by them at a general election. Even then the law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay the interest on such debt as it falls due, and to discharge the principal of such debt within eighteen years from the contracting thereof. By the amendment of 1854 it was still further provided that "the tolls on the canals should not be reduced below those of 1853, except by the Canal Board, with the concurrence of the Legislature." The effect of these inhibitions has been not only to prevent the State from enlarging the canal, but also from reducing the tolls—even temporarily—to meet and overcome competition, or unusual depressions in the prices of produce.

The total canal debt of the State is now $12,564,700, less $9,312,000 now in the sinking fund, leaving $3,252,700 to be provided for, and to which the above-mentioned inhibitions apply. A plan was devised last Winter to fund this debt for a period of eighteen years. It was brought before the Produce Exchange of this City, and met the approval and recommendation of that body. It was subsequently presented to the Legislature, by Mr. J. T. HAYES, as the head of the spouse, and came very near adoption. We understand that this plan, with some modifications, will be presented to the new Legislature, and that a strong effort will be made to secure its adoption. The details of the plan, as modified, are substantially these: To pass a law conferring upon the Canal Board the power to adjust the toll-sheet, in their judgment, according to the future exigencies of trade, and thereby enable them to overcome temporary share competitions with the canal. But as the Canal Board would naturally be loth to incur the odium of direct taxation, which might ensue from any considerable decrease of tolls, and which might operate detrimentally to party interests, it is proposed to dispose of that difficulty permanently by authorizing the Commissioners of the Canal Fund to borrow an amount sufficient to fund the canal debt at eighteen years, the interest to be paid by annual tax, provided the surplus canal tolls should be insufficient for that purpose. Such an act, it is asserted upon high legal authority, would be in strict harmony with the seventh article of the Constitution. After being passed by the Legislature it would go to the people in November next for their approval, and if ratified, would then become operative as a law. This, it is claimed, would entirely obviate the necessity of constitutional amendment, which would require at least three years to perfect.

It is claimed for this plan that it would empower the Canal Board to reduce the tolls to a point at which they would yield a sum sufficient to improve the canals, as fast as absolutely required, to the extent of two or three millions, besides paying the current interest on the funded debt, and providing a sinking fund which would extinguish the principal in eighteen years. A careful computation made in the Canal Auditor's office at Albany demonstrates that an annual contribution to a sinking fund of $208,525 54, invested at five per cent., will extinguish a debt of $10,000,000 in eighteen years. That sum, in addition to the annual interest on the funded debt—say $600,000 more—would amount to less than a million of dollars a year. Our net receipts from tolls the present year, even with the existing expensive system of management and repairs, were $4,889,773 60. Last year they were $5,589,261 12, and with a proper system they could be made—at present rates of toll—to reach over $[illegible] annually.

From these figures it will be seen that by the proposed plan, after defraying the first expenditure for putting the canal in thorough good order—say at a cost of three millions, and in two years—the tolls would, at one-third the present rates, pay the interest on the funded debt, and ultimately extinguish the principal, besides leaving a margin sufficient to operate the canal without resorting to taxation. Such a reduction of tolls would, moreover, attract additional business to the canals, defy all competition from rival routes, and effectually put an end to existing diversions of trade from the City of New-York. Ultimately, when the funded debt should be paid, the State could reduce tolls to the mere cost of operating the canal and keeping it in repair, and thus make it what it was originally intended to be—a national highway of commerce, practically free to all comers.

The plan which we have thus endeavored to explain certainly seems to be plausible, and it is rendered more so by the fact that the practical and shrewd business men who constitute the New-York Produce Exchange have given it their indorsement, after careful examination. We hope that the Democratic majority at Albany will devise some practical remedy, during the present Winter, for the large and growing diversion of our trade. By so doing they can rid their party of the ancient odium which it won by the adoption of the "stop and tax policy" of 1842, from which the Erie Canal has suffered ever since. They have the opportunity of doing a great service to this City and the State, and it remains to be seen if they have the disposition and the ability.

Woman Suffrage in New-Hampshire.

Taken as a whole, the Woman Suffrage Convention just held at Concord seems to have been one of the most reasonable and influential meetings ever yet called in behalf of this cause. The Convention was all wrong, as usual, and perhaps as a matter of course, in its political premises and dogmas. It erred, like all other bodies of that nature, in demanding as "natural rights" what are only political privileges; in defining as intrinsic or birthright possessions what can only be conceded or conferred by the positive enactments of society. The resolutions ran, "we demand suffrage for women as a right of which they are unjustly deprived by men,"—a total misapprehension of the source whence suffrage comes. They declared that "a Government created and administered by men alone is not a republican Government,"—which, of course, is not true, and never can be, any more than by "resolving" the moon to be a green cheese, we can make it so. We are further told that "such a Government cannot do justice to women, nor secure the welfare of its citizens." Here again is a mere valueless assertion, contrary to experience, as is also the assertion that "the legislation of men alone is class legislation." It might as well be urged that any legislation in which tables did not share, was mere "class legislation,"—even though both men and women should take part in it.

But when, on the other hand, the resolutions leave behind all this nonsense of legal right and "republican privilege," and begin to discuss the subject as one of expediency, of political wisdom, of practicability and of desirability, the case becomes fit to hear and to consider with great care. Take, for example, these three from the long catalogue of General resolutions:

Resolved, That no country needs the cultivated intellect and enlightened conscience of woman in politics, in order to counteract the influences of ignorance and vice, to stay the ravages of intemperance, to check public and private extravagance and to establish a higher standard of political morality.

Resolved, That woman needs the ballot not as a weapon, but the exercise of suffrage will be a direct agent in the solid and lasting and successful work of woman, demanding her thought, time, strength and labors, and including her activities in numerous objects of study and national interest.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every Christian woman to demand and exercise her right to vote for the enactment of good laws and the selection of capable and honest public officers.

Here, we repeat, is chance for argument pro and con., and for sensible thought and consideration. A woman demands of her husband as an "inborn and indefeasible right," the liberty of keeping his accounts on the ground that she is as much interested in receipts and expenditures as he. She may or may not get her "rights" by that demand—probably will not, unless she is the better man of the two. Let her, however, manifest her good judgment by showing her husband that confidence, economy, mutual respect, and every other quality that is desirable in the matter, can be secured by such an enlargement of woman's duties, (rather than "woman's rights,") and he is only too glad to effect the transfer.

In the speeches of Concord it was noteworthy that the most sense was uttered by women—the most nonsense by men—which fact may be accepted, if anybody likes, as an argument for woman's suffrage in itself. Dr. HATHAWAY, for example, said she believed in working for converts to the woman's cause, rather than noisily declaiming on woman's wrongs. Rev. P. A. HANAFORD said she thought that man and woman should work together, believing that the interests of the whole country would be better served, especially regarding education, temperance, charities, and other subjects in which woman's temperament naturally interested her. On the other hand, one Rev. Mr. BABCOCK held that "any man who opposed the woman suffrage movement earnestly was a man devoid of conscience and common sense, and a disgrace to the woman who bore him;" while Rev. Mr. STRATTON prated about woman's "natural rights according to our organic law."

It cannot be denied that the woman suffrage cause has gained of late both in dignity and influence. Of course, as much cannot be expected in Massachusetts and New-Hampshire, where women are in a surplus, as in Wyoming and Kansas, where they are much wanted, and where political concessions will be made to them in order to increase their immigration. But the recent Conventions at the East have been worth respectful consideration.

Trades' Unions Abroad—Their Effect upon Industry.

From a controversy which is at present being waged in England between the advocates and opponents of trades' unions, some interesting facts may be gleaned regarding the general effect of these organizations upon trade, and the extent to which they are likely to modify the existing relations between labor and capital. The question of affording to the funds of such societies the legislative protection which has hitherto been denied them, is likely to claim, at no distant date, the notice of the British Parliament, but, pending its introduction there, both parties are busied in preparing as strong a case as possible for or against the institutions in question.

On behalf of the employers, Mr. EDWARD ASHWORTH brings home two specific charges against trades' unions, viz.: That they have driven the shipbuilding trade from the Thames, and are rapidly driving the trade of engine building from British to continental workshops. In support of the first assertion, he shows that while the cost of raw materials is very nearly the same on the Thames as on the Clyde and the Wear, the rate of wages demanded is very much higher. Taking the total of a day's work of twelve different classes of artisans employed in shipbuilding, he finds that, while on the Thames it is equal to $31 60 currency, (calculated on our present gold basis,) on the Wear it only amounts to $16 70, and on the Clyde to $17 60; showing an advantage in favor of the northern rivers of 29.24 per cent. in the one case, and 22.72 per cent. in the other. He maintains that the unions prevented the wages from falling to such a level as would have enabled the Thames builders to compete successfully with their rivals, and that it is solely due to the resolution of the men themselves not to take less than $1 95 currency a day that they are at present dependent upon charity, instead of earning their $1 35 like the northern artisans. The case of the Society of Amalgamated Engineers, which has 308 branches, 62,500 members, accumulated funds equal to $700,000 gold, and an annual revenue of $424,625 gold, is cited to show how hopeless is the contest in which single firms have attempted to dispute the mandates of a body so powerful. Evidence is brought to prove that French and Belgian workshops not only attract the continental trade which formerly came to England, but are making inroads upon the home trade itself. The reason alleged for this is, that while the average pay of the foreign engine shops is 67½ cents currency per day of eleven hours, that of the English amounts to $1 35 per day of ten hours.

Mr. GEORGE POTTER, the well-known English labor champion, comes forward in defence of trades' unions. His refutation of Mr. ASHWORTH's facts has not been very successful, and, indeed, leaves them pretty much as they stand. But his definition of the scope and purpose of trades' unions is so far a sound one, and indicates the direction in which their true justification is to be found. He describes them as "means taken by combination to give the workman the power of bargaining, so that he should suffer no reduction of wages below the regular demand and supply rate which governs the price of labor." His opponents urge that to this definition must be added the phrase "when the supply exceeds the demand," as it is really from the effect of competition in an overstocked market that the unionist seeks to be protected. Even this may be admitted, however, and still leave a very good case for the unions. The "natural laws of supply and demand" are somewhat ruthless agencies when left to the unchecked administration of self-interested employers. It is perfectly clear that without organization labor can never treat on equal terms with capital; and a workingman has an undoubted right to use all lawful means to enhance the value of the labor which he brings into the market.

The mistakes of trades' unions have hitherto consisted in somewhat overdoing their part. The attempt to impose an uniform variety of artificial restrictions upon trade must always and fatally for those it seeks to benefit. An undue subjection of the employer is as much to be deprecated as the helpless submission of the employed. Both have interests which, though apparently conflicting, are in reality perfectly identical, and in proportion to the strength of this conviction the growth of trade will be harmonious and its prosperity secured.

The Common Cause of American Republicanism.

The speech of Mr. SEWARD at the dinner recently given him by Minister LERDO, the Premier of the Cabinet of JUAREZ, is remarkable as a vivid picture of the condition of American republicanism, in the year 1869. Intent on the solution of our own terrible problem, few of us, probably, really appreciated the peril which menaced the cause of republicanism, at that moment, throughout the world, and, above all, in the Western Hemisphere. It seems to have been the purpose of Mr. SEWARD, at the Lerdo banquet, to show how this great cause was simultaneously set upon from all quarters, and, more especially by France, England, Spain, Austria. "With the United States in anarchy," said the distinguished statesman, "San Domingo reestablished as a monarchy, and Mexico as an empire, it was unavoidable that republicanism must perish throughout the whole continent."

Mr. SEWARD declares that in this moment of supreme peril he "called upon the republican rulers and statesmen of the continent for moral aid," and conjured them, "by all the force of common sympathy, common danger and common ambition, to be faithful and persevering in their own republics."

He declares significantly:

"The United States became for the first time, in sincerity and earnestness, the friend and ally of every other republican State in America, and all the republican States became from that hour the friends and allies of the United States. This alliance soon asserted respect and confidence in unexpected quarters. Switzerland, Italy, Russia, North Germany, Turkey, Egypt, Morocco, Siam and China, became the friends and moral allies of the American Republics."

Perhaps it may be thought a strong phrase to use when Mr. SEWARD avers that France and England, "with the concurrence, voluntary in some cases and forced in others, of the other maritime Powers of Western Europe, lifted the rebels of the United States to the rank and advantage of lawful belligerents," and that "the statesmen of Europe announced that the United States had ceased to exist as one whole, sovereign and organized nation." However, it is well to recall in testimony to this assertion that the same day on which Earl RUSSELL gave notice of the English Cabinet's determination to recognise the rebels, he instructed Lord LYONS at Washington to inform Mr. SEWARD that "the late United States" must be regarded as broken apart, and "Her Majesty's Government do not wish you to make any mystery of that view." Before JEFFERSON DAVIS was a month "in power," and before the "permanent Government" had been established at Richmond, France and England were considering through their diplomatic embassies the propriety of asking him to take part in a European Congress respecting privateering among nations.

As the speech of Mr. SEWARD at the Lerdo banquet regarded the United States during its struggle, so his speech at the Romero banquet, a few days later, related to the simultaneous Mexican struggle. The two speeches should be read together, as we have presented them, they being really the supplements of each other. They show how intimately the "sister republics" were connected; for, as GRANT and SHERIDAN said, the Mexican Empire, was "part and parcel of the rebellion;" and how it became necessary for us to insure the expulsion of the France-Austrian dynasty from our neighbor's domains.

A Liverpool merchant addresses to us a letter which we commend to attention as the judgment of a capable and distant observer upon some aspects of our financial problem. The differences with ourselves in regard to taxation and resumption refers rather to forms of expression than to essential points of the argument on either side. His allusion to the payment by this State and other States, in currency, of obligations incurred in coin, indicates, we suspect, an opinion very generally entertained on the other side of the Atlantic. In this particular, at least, we are charged with repudiation.

We present in another page an important statement respecting the business of the past year, and the prospects for the new. It will be seen that there is not the least necessity for that exaggerated alarm which some people are trying to disseminate in reference to coming "panics" and "failures." The dry goods dealers are of opinion that if gold went down to par it would cause no further disturbance of their business. The year 1869 was one of average prosperity in all departments of trade, and if profits have not been as large it is owing to the fact that merchants and dealers have not brought down their expenses in proportion to the fall in gold and prices. Rent, for instance, is very high, and unavoidable charges generally press heavily upon all classes of business men. The outlook for 1870 is by no means one to create despondency, and if people would only give up frightening themselves about shadows, trade would soon settle down of itself into its ordinary safe channels.

The other Democratic papers ought to be very proud of the Memphis Avalanche. It writes of the late ROWIN M. STANTON in a strain which must make the heart of the Albany Argus leap for joy. It calls him a "bad man," and winding up its subject so rapidly that the two succeeding sentences run thus: "A villain has shuffled off this mortal coil. A despot has kicked the bucket." "A little soul, steeped in sin, went to the ——." These are the mild parts of the article—the strong passages are not fit for republican ears. The Argus, the World, and other papers of the same way of thinking must feel that the Memphis Avalanche has cut them all out. But they will always be remembered for casting all the dirt at an eminent public man which they could conveniently rake together.

Mr. SEWARD's travels in Mexico have convinced him that the Republic is destined for a brighter career than any which it has hitherto achieved. He has seen such evidence of the industry and energy of the people as have evidently made a great impression on his mind. "I now know," he said at a banquet given to him by Señor ROMERO, "that Mexico will remain independent, republican, and enjoy peace and prosperity in the future." This is a striking prediction, but Mr. SEWARD declares that he is prepared to adduce substantial grounds for making it. The speeches of the ex-Secretary in Mexico have been distinguished by much of his old fire and vigor, and he has evidently been well satisfied with the interest and amusement afforded him by his journey. No one can deny that Mexico owes a great deal to Mr. SEWARD, and it is no more than his due that he should every where be received with the greatest kindness and enthusiasm.

The letters which we published yesterday on "Wall-street frauds" sought not to be quite without effect even on the indurated consciences of a broker. Our correspondent "R. L." stated one or two very fair points, so to speak, against the man who can be lively anywhere in the world except at home. "I think we know now," she remarks, "why so many men have so little conversation." They use themselves up "at business"—or what passes for business. "K. S.," another correspondent, complains that "boys are neglected by their fathers, to grow up anyhow; wives are left to manage their families and homes as best they may." The reason is not that business cares occupy all a man's time, but that the habit of neglecting home happens to be very popular among a certain class of men, and that they think the dregs of their time quite enough to give to wives and children. We are afraid that the sarcasms of our lady correspondents will not change the leopard's spots.

If the new French Ministry has really been formed in accordance with the programme published by the Liberté, there will be some reason to conclude that the Emperor has got over his fit of vacillation, and means to do what he can towards finishing his celebrated "fabric" of constitutional government. The composition of the Ministry would probably be satisfactory to all but the extremists. M. EMILE OLLIVIER, the Minister of Justice, has himself been a sufferer by the rigor of personal government, but he was long since reconciled to the Empire. The new members generally are men of moderately liberal opinions, and will certainly be an improvement on previous administrations. Whether sufficient has been conceded to restore tranquillity to political counsels is more than doubtful. But the Emperor has made a beginning, and he will find it easier, upon the whole, to go forward than to turn back.

The opposition which the appointment of Dr. TEMPLE to the See of Exeter has evoked, does not seem to abate. The new Prelate made one of the essays in the famous volume of Essays and Reviews and the strictly orthodox have never forgiven him that offence. At one time it seemed not improbable that a formidable opposition would be organized to the Premier's nomination, but as we learned by telegraph the other day, the Bishop has been consecrated—although not "Archbishop of Canterbury," as the cable message erroneously stated. So bitter was the feeling against Dr. TEMPLE that, as we learn from the Spectator, a certain clergyman demanded proof that Dr. TEMPLE was born in wedlock, "under cover of some obsolete clerical statute." The Bishop passed through this test satisfactorily—but his enemies have no reason to congratulate themselves on the manner in which they have carried on their opposition.

One or two of our contemporaries earnestly recommended people not to place wine or spirits on the table for their visitors on New-Year's Day. The advice was not taken, partly, it is to be hoped, because it is not necessary to be churlish to rational men for the sake of preventing irrational ones from getting drunk. Unquestionably, however, there was a great deal of what we suppose must be called "genteel intoxication." Men who ought to know better took "a glass or two" in every house they visited, and, as a natural consequence, they must have been somewhat unwelcome callers to those who were last on their lists. It is a kindly practice to offer visitors refreshments, for when a man is doing his New-Year's Day round he is very likely to miss his dinner, and must gather up such fragments as come in his way. The hard drinkers are sure to take advantage of "open house," and as we stated yesterday, the streets on Saturday night were not fit for any member of a temperance society to see. In the lower parts of the city town, where poisoned rum or whisky does its foul work, a dozen men were either stabbed or shot. If half the liquor stores in the City could be suppressed, and some sort of strict surveillance exercised over all doubtful places, there would soon be much less for Police and Justices to do.

A report of the trichinian disease comes from Illinois, where a number of fatal cases have occurred. This disease has got a terrible character, partly from the Latin shape of the name, and, no doubt, a good deal from the nature of the magnum; but it is, after all, a thing that need not be so dreadful. The best cure of it is calorie—a good boiling of the pig meat, to begin with. The disease is an aggravated form of the measles, to which pork was always subject, and, in all cases, those affected have been eating the meat raw in the shape of sausages or smoked bacon. Beef and other meats may probably be safely eaten in that condition; but your pig is an animal that should always "pass through fire" in some way before people use it as an aliment.

The World very properly objects to the resuscitation of any more "antique love affairs" in connection with Mr. PEABODY. Since the death of the philanthropist a dozen ladies at least have started up to claim him for their own. Each one is prepared to certify that Mr. PEABODY offered her marriage, but that at the time she loved another who was poor but honest, and for his sake sacrificed the bright visions which—and so the rigmarole goes on. There is no use to refute these statements, but it is difficult to see what good there is in publishing them. The ladies who nobly turned their backs upon riches, and married honest poverty, cannot be thinking of making another match now, and to say the truth their self-denial is getting a little out of date. It would be interesting to know how many unmarried ladies there are who would have said "No" to Mr. PEABODY even in his old age. The World is quite right in suggesting that there should be a statute of limitations for some love affairs.

The Star now shines more brightly than ever. It began the new year with substantial evidence of prosperity—new type, new heading, and a mechanical appearance which satisfies the highest requirements of the art typographic. The name of JOSEPH HOWARD, Jr., now appears as editor and publisher of the brightest two-cent daily in the City.

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE

The Contested Elections—The New Administration—France and Russia—Transatlantic Cables—Personal.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Dec. 17, 1869.

The Corps Legislatif is still occupied with the validation of the contested elections, but the process is a mere farce. Neither truth, justice, nor decency has anything to do with it. One of the most scandalous whitewashings ever given to a candidate who had forced his way into a legislative assembly through the combined influence of Government patronage and corruption, is that which M. CLEMENT DUVERNOIS has just received at the hands of the majority. This journalist is, as you are aware, a special pet and protégé of the Emperor, and he was sent as a candidate to the Hautes Alpes, not merely with administrative papers to back him, but with unlimited power to promise anything in the way of Government subventions that might be demanded of him. As M. PRÉVOST PARADOL very justly says, the attitude of the Government in this gentleman's case amounted just to this declaration to the electors: "You are too poor to occupy yourselves with politics; we will sell you the improvements to which you are entitled in return for the election of M. CLEMENT DUVERNOIS." The sums awarded in fulfillment of this contract for purposes of irrigation, canalization and removal of bridge tolls amounted to a sum so enormous that it was easy to be seen that M. DUVERNOIS had behind him something more than the ordinary official influence. As the Emperor's favorite, in fact nothing could be refused to him. Was it any wonder, then, that M. DUVERNOIS, although but little known in the department, and with no strong family or social influences to aid him, should have been returned by a large majority?

The surprising feature in the case is the validation of an election, secured under such disgraceful circumstances, by a Chamber which professes to denounce official corruption, and which commenced its inquiries into the electoral scandals by disqualifying the Marquis DE ST. HILAIRE on charges infinitely less serious. And what renders this result still more remarkable is the fact that it was in a great measure brought about by the vote and the influence of M. EMILE OLLIVIER, the man to whose advent to office the country has been eagerly looking to put a stop to these abuses.

The importance attached by the Emperor to the validation of this election, was betrayed during the last day of the debate, by a circumstance which has given rise to indignant comment. During the proceedings his Chef de Cabinet, M. CONTI, was not only present, eagerly watching the course the debate was taking, but was observed to be buttonholing and corresponding with the Deputies by slips of paper whenever he could get an opportunity. Thus not only was the personal influence of the Chief of the State brought to bear on the constituency, but on the Chamber itself in which the issue was being tried. Do you believe that under such circumstances much is to be hoped for from the Parliamentary regime so conjointly understood by his Majesty and his new Minister, M. EMILE OLLIVIER?

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.

M. FORCADE DE LA ROQUETTE has lost so much ground by the exposures made of his electoral iniquities during the last few days, that he has abandoned the idea of forming a Ministry, or even of remaining in office. He means to present himself for election in some circumscription, probably that of Marmande, the seat for which will be vacated by a Government supporter, and where he will be sure of being returned. After two or three months' parade and test of his new-born liberality in the Chamber, he will probably join the administration of M. OLLIVIER. With the exception of the fact that this latter gentleman is to be Prefect, nothing is as yet settled regarding the personnel of the new Ministry. Negotiations are still in progress between the members of the Centre Droit and the Centre Gauche, and Count DARU has had several interviews with the Emperor. After the extraordinary course pursued by M. OLLIVIER in the debate and vote on the validation of the election of M. DUVERNOIS, it does not seem to me possible that any of the members of the Centre Gauche can take office under the former gentleman.

The new Ministry will not be gazetted until after the disputed elections have all been disposed of, which will probably not be for another week.

THE REGENCY.

MM. OLLIVIER, PIETRI and ROUHER are said to be working at a project of Senatus Consultum to definitively regulate the Regency of the Empress after NAPOLEON's death, and also the situation of the Prince Imperial until he comes of age.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA.

General FIRUKY is shortly expected back from St. Petersburg. He has accomplished the object of his mission, the results of which will be developed as soon as the budget for the army comes up for consideration.

TRANSATLANTIC TELEGRAPH CABLES.

The passage in President GRANT's Message relative to the French cable meets with general approbation from all our citizens on this side of the Atlantic. It is the more refreshed from the fact that, from what transpired at the last meeting of the French shareholders of that line, there is an evident intention of their coming to some arrangement with the English Transatlantic Cable Company, either for a fusion, or the continuance of the present rates for messages, either of which would be opposed to the interests of the Press and the public, both in Europe and America. Let me just state a few facts in support of this view.

On referring to one of the latest money articles in the London Times, I find Anglo-American cable stock quoted at from 14½ to 15, the par value of the stock being £10. The shares in this Company are therefore at 150 per cent. premium. The stock of the French cable is quoted at from 13½ to 13¾, the par value being £20, showing a discount of 35 per cent., occasioned by the uncertainty prevailing regarding its permanent connection with our American shores. Nearly all the submarine cables are much above par. The Anglo-Mediterranean is quoted at 17½, par value £10. The Electric International, 22½ to 23, par value £100. Submarine, 24½ to 25, par value £100. The Lesseps Times, in an article published some weeks ago, showed that of all the investments made during the last ten years in matters of public utility, such as railroads, steamship lines and telegraphs, the latter guaranteed superior inducements to capitalists, the profits not being less than 22 per cent. per annum.

From the report presented at the last meeting of the stockholders of the French-American Cable, I take the following statement regarding the cost of construction:

Construction and laying of cable	$920,000
Paid Messrs. ERLANGER and REUTER for French grant	[illegible]
Extraordinary expenses	100,000
Paid for grant for New-York State	10,000
Total cost	$4,130,000
Other expenses	131,000
Grand total	$4,261,000

Or about $8,522,000 in gold.

The thirteenth week in which this cable was worked yielded the sum of $11,[illegible] in gold, being just eleven per cent. upon the actual first cost, including the bonus to Messrs. ERLANGER and REUTER, and other extraordinary expenses, which might have been avoided. Thus it is evident that Transatlantic cables pay a very large interest upon the investment.

It is notorious that the authorized agents of this French Company, Messrs. ERLANGER and REUTER, on whose previous delights towards the United States it is unnecessary for me to dwell, when the difficulty arose about landing the cable on our shores agreed to obtain from the French Government the surrender of the twenty years' exclusive privilege granted to that Company. Now, at the meeting of the above holders to which I refer, the President of the Company declared that "he did not consider it possible that a Government which had entered in so solemn a manner into such an agreement as the French Government had made with this Company could repudiate the act, especially a Government like that of France, which had always honorably kept its engagements," and Baron ROTHSCHILD stated, in addition, that the French Government had no intention to withdraw the privilege conceded by it to this Company of an exclusive monopoly of twenty years.

This is the sort of faith which Messrs. ERLANGER and REUTER have with our Government. They made a solemn written promise to obtain from France a reciprocal right for United States citizens, and with this understanding the United States Government, with its usual generosity, allowed the French cable to be landed and operated. It is said that this withdrawal from their agreement on the part of the agents of the French Government is based on the idea that they will be able to lobby through Congress a confirmation of the monopoly. These facts will, I think, convince our Government of the necessity of suspending the authorization to work the French cable until the permission applied for by certain of our citizens to land an American cable on the French shore is definitively accorded.

The Belgo-American cable is the only enterprise or project of this character which, in its connection with Europe, secures to the Government and people of the United States all those privileges of neutrality, secrecy in the transmission of dispatches and economy of rates which we have a right to insist upon, in connecting such valuable rights. You will be pleased to learn that in spite of the opposition and intrigues of the other companies, the projectors of the line have succeeded in making a contract with cable manufacturers in England for the making and laying of the cable, for which a concession has been obtained from the Belgian Government, subject, of course, to the approval of Congress.

I have seen the contract, and I am glad to state that the prices agreed upon show a marked reduction on those heretofore exacted, being much lower than those at which any other cable has been constructed.

The following are the conditions of the tender put in:

No. 1, 30,000 miles, of 2,000 yards each, of deep sea cable, at £100	$684,000
No. 2, 80 nautical miles of shore cable, at £425	4,760
No. 3, 40 nautical miles medium shore, at £425	19,040
No. 4, 100 nautical miles heavy shore, at £614	61,400
2,960 nautical miles	$769,200

The conductor is to be of seven copper wires, 300 pounds to the nautical mile. Insulation—Four coatings of gutta percha and four of compound, alternately, 400 pounds to the nautical mile. Covering—Spun Manila yarn, eight strands each, soaked in pure Stockholm tar of 300 pounds to the mile; the whole to be surrounded with gutta percha compound and properly covered. This is to be the deep sea cable. The other portions are to be manufactured with all the latest improvements. The cable is to be laid and in working order by the 1st of August, 1871.

This contract is for cash, unlike the contracts made for the other Atlantic cables, the manufacturers generally taking one-third of their pay in the stock of the Company.

The contractors agree to lay the cable for $100,000, so that when in working order the 2,960 miles will have cost $869,200, or $4,746,000 in gold. The French cable, which is 2,320 miles in length, cost, to make and lay, $1,000,000, or $8,100,000 in gold, besides extraordinary expenses, amounting to $100,000, an extra $100,000 paid to Messrs. ERLANGER and REUTER for the French concession, and $10,000 paid to the State of New-York, making a total of $8,150,000 in gold. The cost of the Belgian cable will therefore be $1,404,800 less than that of the French line.

The capital of the Anglo-American and Atlantic companies and the Newfoundland line, when consolidated, will represent in sterling currency $4,750,000, over which the earnings will have to be divided.

The liberality of the Belgian Government in giving to an American company this privilege for twenty years, even to the exclusion of its own citizens, will not fail to be appreciated in the United States. Without that exclusive concession in fact it would have been impossible to raise the capital required. The importance of this line cannot be exaggerated. With the Belgian Government our relations have always been of the most friendly character, and it is difficult to see how any cause of future trouble can arise between us. The Belgo-American cable will be a strictly neutral line in time of war, and any attempt to interfere with it on the part of a European Power will be regarded in the light of an attack upon the American and Belgian flags upon the high seas. In the event of difficulties arising between the United States and England and France its value would be immense to us.

A CANARD.

The Liberté of last evening has a paragraph to the following effect: "Our readers will remember that about twelve months back the Russian Government ordered 500,000 muskets of a new model from American manufacturers. General BANKS was intrusted by the United States with the mission of delivering these arms to the Czar. The General has just acquitted himself of it, and is now about to return to the United States, the bearer of a fresh order for some muskets."

The inventive power of the French journalists is to me a subject of daily wonderment. How such a canard as this could have originated in a well-informed and carefully-edited paper like the Liberté is, however, utterly inconceivable.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. General BANKS is on the list for the first presentations at Court. The General dined with Lord LYONS yesterday, and will shortly leave for New-York.

ROME

The Weather—Council Proceedings—Art, the Great Counselor—American Sculptors in the Eternal City—Roger Williams' Statue.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ROME, Wednesday, Dec. 15, 1869.

Since writing last, the gloom and the drip of skies rotting with wet have continued, and no cheerful light yet beaks on Rome. The Bishops and the priests and the long lines of train-followers are spinning in carriages of all feet every day to St. Peter's, through the narrow dirty street a mile long, which leads to the bridge of St. Angelo.

THE COUNCIL.

Of the Council little can be said, because little is done, and little can be known. Even to gratify an impatient curiosity, it is not best to invent, or lay out plans of what will probably never be done, nor yet even thought of. One or two meetings of the Fathers have been held since the opening, and the only published record has been confined to a description of what the Cardinals and Bishops wore on their heads, or the thickness of golden embroidery, or the number of jewels on the mantles of the disciples of the Nazarene. The religion, or theology, of the Church has its expression too much in the cut of a priest's gown, or the color of an altar cloth, or in the thousand other things which go to make up the harness of a showy establishment. The number of Bishops now here is about 700, and probably few others will be added to the list. They are lodged in all sorts of places in every part of the city—some of them with luxury and even state, and some with hardly comfort. Some are rolling about in gilded coaches of ceremony, and some make the best of their way in shabby hackney carriages. The scattering priest and as they pass, Generals marching off of the great army of proselytism, endeavoring to conquest the world. Many have been here often before, and a few are visiting Rome for the first time. But for a moment let us leave these and pass to the agreeable subject of art.

ART.

Art in Rome is the great counselor, and it is a science which is indestructible. Of ancient art, the churches and palaces and vast museums are full, and of modern art—that which is created year by year by the living workers of all countries—there is no end. Every day, for months, new studios might be found to visit. America has a conspicuous place, for no foreign nation has so many sculptors and painters residing here. From forty to fifty from the United States are now practicing art in Rome, and the number has been as one time nearly sixty. So much is produced, that in speaking of what is most worthy of praise, one does not know where to begin. From time to time, in my many visits to Rome, I have used opportunities to give an account of some of the works produced; but on looking back, after an interval, I find that much is omitted. Of something like four and twenty sculptors, we have the novelty of about ten women practicing that art, and the last arrived is VINNIE REAM, about whose skill more is known in America than here. Such names as Miss STEBBINS and Miss HOSMER are already familiar to all interested in art, and Miss WHITNEY promises to acquire equal fame. Her last work, just got ready for public examination, is more interesting if not more important, than any she has before attempted. It is a single figure in a sitting posture, symbolical of the Rome of to-day. More mind has been put into this conception than we are apt to find in figures typical of the social and moral conditions of communities. It is easy enough to represent Britannia, as the English generally do, as a fat woman, in a brass helmet, pouring out tea; or America, in liberty cap, or bell-crowned hat, on the stump, crying out for man's and woman's rights. But for Rome neither mamp nor bell-crowned hat are characteristic types, and ROMULUS and REMUS and the wolf's dugs are worn out.

Miss WHITNEY, in her "Rome," has produced a model in which is embodied the dignity of a grandeur passed forever way, the misery of a moral degradation, and the pity which appeals for relief for physical distress. This woman of Rome is old, and sits forlorn on some fragments of her stately habitation in ruins. The face is solemn and thoughtful, and in its lines is traced the work of a waiting mind as that of which Angelo, but made to yield, and all power and splendor lost, might have given the model. Across the knees a mantle is thrown, the worn and rusty, but once gorgeous robe of ancient Rome. The shoulders are covered with the single garment, then and now, of the beggar class. From the lean hands is falling the obolus of charity, reluctantly held as in remembrance of the shame of the fallen State. At the side, half concealed, is half a mask. It is the face of a priest, of that type so common, from which all feeling of the sweet charities of life is gone, and upon which suspicion, cunning, superstition, fraud and aesthetic conceit, have set their stamp. There is given to it also an animal quality, a mixture of the asperity of the wolf and the half-suppressed force of low desire. To help the contrast between the power of the past and the actual fall, on the border of the robe are engraved some of the great works of sculptured art, dug out of the ruins of the past.

AMERICAN ARTISTS.

The names that I remember among American women now practicing sculpture here, are: Miss Whitney, Miss Hosmer, Miss Freeman, Miss Stebbins, Miss Edmonia Lewis, Miss Vinnie Ream and Miss Foley. Let it be understood that they do not wish to be called sculptresses, but sculptors—better English and better as a term of art. The time is past when correct writers or speakers change the gender of the substantive, except in cases such as governess and the like, where the profession can be exercised but by one sex or indicated by one term.

Our artists, or some of the most fortunate among them, have been favored to such a degree, that they have much reason to be satisfied and grateful. Some of them live in palaces, and others are moving so rapidly on the road to fortune, as to have a prospect of being lodged with not less comfort and dignity. The pleasures of social life they do not undervalue, and some of them contribute in a liberal manner to the enjoyment of their countrymen visiting Rome. The skill in art of some is varied, and to that is added culture, and the happy faculty of being agreeable, not less in their homes than in the places where their art work is done. They are with their families, so numerous as to form a community; a little world, indeed, in which all the passions have free scope and healthful play.

ROGER WILLIAMS' STATUE.

I find that one of the best statues made in Rome during the past year is that of ROGER WILLIAMS, for Rhode Island, by Mr. FRANKLIN SIMMONS. The artists are seldom in harmony in their opinions about the merits of the productions of others of their craft. I observe with pleasure that an extremely favorable judgment as to the excellence of this statue by Mr. SIMMONS is very generally expressed by them. Such a success is not common, and has been a great encouragement to this sculptor, who, with considerable experience in America, has practiced his art for less than two years in Italy. Artists are the best judges of the quality of work in their own line of art, but their prejudices are often so strong that it is not easy to get from them an opinion or a criticism which is altogether trustworthy. Careful observers, not of the craft, who have many opportunities for observation, are more inclined to rely upon the knowledge of artists than upon their expressed opinions.

As no authentic portrait of WILLIAMS have been preserved, this statue of the founder of Rhode Island may be considered a pure creation. To invest an ideal of beauty may not be difficult, but to embody for us the lineaments of an historic personage, all traces of whose outward frame are lost, must demand the exercise of the highest faculties, and a considerable degree of success must be regarded as a triumph. This ideal WILLIAMS has enough of Milton's gravity and gentleness, joined with that strength which we know belonged to this remarkable character. We have WILLIAMS the thinker, the robust polemic, and the earnest friend of justice for the conscience and liberty for all. The costume of the Puritan time, and that probably worn by WILLIAMS, has been carefully studied, and its picturesqueness, so much greater than that of the present times of our day, has given the artist an advantage in his effort to produce an effect in harmony with the demands of art. Among portrait statues sent to America, some mistakes have been made which might be called and if they were not laughable. The people of Boston may "make fun" of their two demigods in alloy, for a longer period than in life they worshipped them. A sculptor who has any reputation to gain or lose takes upon himself a great responsibility when he dares to associate his name with the design for a monument to the hero of a nation. Alas for men of his ambition, for his love of gain, lead him to undertake that for which his powers are unequal. The ridicule, if not the mischievous of generations, will follow his blundering efforts.

It may be added of Mr. SIMMONS, what has been stated in substance before, that he is admitted, with less reluctance than usual, by those of the same profession, that he is sure to reach a high place here, where eminence is not easily won, even with much talent and effort. This artist works with all the old industry, and with more than former zeal. But knowing, as he does, and pointing out worth when, where, and how, the seed of art, scattered on the world, is sown, the singing girl, nearly finished in the clay, has so much feeling, and is modeled with so much of the grace of antique, as to be worthy of LUCCA DELLA ROBBIA. But enough for to-day, and some more words about art may be added in another letter. ANGELICO.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

The Spanish Loan of the 10th of April, 1869—The Liberation of the Gunboats—Feeling in Madrid—The Conduct of the United States—Towards San Domingo—Probable Fusion in the Unionist and Unitary Republican Parties, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Monday, Dec. 13, 1869.

The debates on the subject of the disappearance of the Crown jewels will take place today. The defenders of MARIA CHRISTINA and ISABELLA II. pretend to say that they are in a position to prove that the two Queens carried no jewelry away but such as belonged to them, either by purchase or as presents from the municipality of Madrid, or by gift of inheritance from their ancestors. The debates will be interesting and the struggle fierce between the accusers and the defenders of the two Queens.

THE SPANISH LOAN OF 10TH APRIL, 1869.

Señor FIGUEROLA had discussed with the Committee of the Chamber part of the documents relating to the loan of one thousand millions of reals. They go to prove the fact, notorious, however, notwithstanding, that the United Bankers of Paris and Frankfort in no case lent a part of this loan in purchase; the rest they accepted only on commission, and they advanced considerable sums on the deposit of Mile deeds of the Spanish exterior debt, taken at twenty-eight to thirty-one in April last. But Señor FIGUEROLA kept secret his operation with the syndicate of bankers concerning his giving them a considerable quantity of the bonds of the interior debt, not the cash, but for sale on the foreign markets, and he also kept from the knowledge of the Cortes that part of the bonds for 300,000,000 of reals had been remitted to the associated bankers as guarantee for 200,000,000 of reals advanced by them to the Spanish Treasury, which latter sum had to be repaid on the 10th of September, if the Treasury did not want the title deeds to be sold at any price to reimburse the advances. The Minister of Finance had taken great care to keep the second phase of the loan from the Cortes. But a new interpellation is announced for Saturday next in which a Deputy will speak upon the questions relating to the repayment of the advances. The whole affair is in a state of impenetrable chaos, and will remain so till a clear light is shed upon it. The Minister has avowed that 497,000,000 of the 1,000,000,000 of reals voted for in April last remained yet to be sold, but he has not said what sums the Treasury has received from the negotiations mentioned above, and this is what the Deputies want to arrive at.

THE LIBERATION OF THE GUNBOATS.

The news of the liberation of the Spanish gunboats by our authorities at New-York has produced an excellent effect at Madrid. This act of justice is primarily due to the courtesy of our Minister to Spain, General SICKLES, after a formal declaration on the part of the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs that the gunboats would never be used against Peru. Everybody here appreciates the conciliatory and equitable spirit shown by our authorities under these delicate circumstances.

THE UNITED STATES AND SAN DOMINGO.

Spaniards are expressing their fears about the steps taken by our Government for the speedy annexation of this colony. This is a very serious question in regard to the future prospect of the Spanish possessions in the West Indies, and it is that natural that the Government at Madrid should feel painful anticipations on the subject.

PROBABLE FUSION OF PARTIES.

The Unionists and Unitary Republicans seem to approach each other and to forget the enormous distances that separates them according to their political creeds. Perhaps they appreciate the immensity of the approaching danger, and the steady, hourly advance of the crisis which is to decide the fate of the PRIM Administration.

Interesting Debates in the Cortes on the Subject of the Abstraction of the Crown Jewels—Character of the Ex-Queen Christina—The Royal Candidates—Spanish Finances—The Abolition of Slavery at Porto Rico, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Wednesday, Dec. 15, 1869.

The debates in the Cortes relating to the Crown jewels, with the abstraction of which the Minister of Finance had charged the two ex-Queens, MARIA CHRISTINA and ISABELLA of Bourbon, commenced on Monday last. Both the galleries and floor of the House were thronged with deputies, ex-deputies, diplomatists and Government officials and their friends; the adhesion was so great, that there was not a seat unoccupied. It was a very serious charge indeed that Señor FIGUEROLA had brought against these two royal ladies, and the former Ministers of the Crown and the friends of the two ex-Queens had strained every nerve in the collection of documents tending to prove that MARIA CHRISTINA and ISABELLA had not abstracted the seventy-three millions of reals worth of jewels belonging to the Crown set down to their account by the Minister of Finance. Señor GUIL Y RENTE, one of their most ardent partisans, had searched for this purpose all the last wills and testaments of the Spanish Sovereigns of the Houses of Austria and Bourbon.

Señor ELDUAYEN was the first to lift a lance as the champion of Bourbon royalty. He defied Señor FIGUEROLA to prove that PHILIP II., PHILIP III., or PHILIP IV., had ever declared that the jewels of the Spanish Crown belonged to the State and not to the Sovereign, as the Ministry had asserted in the sitting of the 3d December. He contended that the State at that time possessed but three gems of a total value of 6,000,000 of reals, and he maintained that this fact was proved by the inventories taken after the death of CHARLES III. and CHARLES IV. He challenged Señor FIGUEROLA to prove the contrary, and he added him to bring satisfactory evidence that the Spanish Crown possessed 100,000,000 worth of jewels at the time of the French invasion in 1808. Much excitement was caused among the audience by the orator's reading whether, said he, emanate from the jewelers employed by the Crown. The latter says in this interesting letter, that MURAT and JOSEPH NAPOLEON carried off all the jewels and gems they could lay hands on, and among them "a Holy Sacrament" valued at 24,000,000. After having made this sweeping charge, Señor FIGUEROLA's figure, the orator dwelt at some length on the letters of King JOSEPH, in which the latter complains of his destitution, these men, and speaks of he was been compelled to pawn some valuables into cash. Then followed Señor ELDUAYEN's thrust, said it was well made. He said:

"If the Ministry cannot prove that the jewels that were abstracted at the period of the French invasion, have been given back by the heirs of those who had sold them, pledged them, or carried them to other parts, it is clear that the charge brought forward by the Ministry is without foundation."

The orator then read the will of FERDINAND VII., in which that Monarch bequeathed the entire Crown jewels and gems specified in an inventory to his heirs and successors. But here comes the hitch. This inventory has never been found; it is not reproduced in the original will. Señor ELDUAYEN tried his best to prove that CHRISTINA could not have made away with this document, saying that nobody had ever seen it, and that to return the charge brought against her of having caused it to be destroyed at the time when she was Regent, and therefore omnipotent in Spain. He also referred to the ex-Queen's marriage contract with FERDINAND VII., (who, by the way, was married three times) in which the donation of a considerable quantity of jewels was recorded, and he gave an enumeration and description of the valuables in question. He held it to be proved that MARIA CHRISTINA had taken but her own jewels, and not any belonging to the Crown, and he cited a fact which he thought of great importance in the controversy, namely, that when FERDINAND VII.'s last will and testament was opened in the presence of Don Garlos of Bourbon and the Grandees of Spain, the Prime Minister, the President of the Council of Ministers, and the Chief Justice of Spain, the contents were read by ministry on the spot.

Yesterday a sitting was opened with a full house in which Señor BUGALLAL spoke for the cause of the two dethroned Queens. Señor LOJO ARIAS, a Progressista Deputy, spoke after Señor BUGALLAL, taking an impartial view of the case and inviting the Chamber to constitute a commission of fourteen members, for the purpose of making a strict and searching inquiry on the subject. He added that Señor FIGUEROLA should be accounted to prove the serious charges he had brought against the two ex-Queens, or to undergo the consequences of being looked upon as a slanderer.

A kind champion of ISABELLA II. spoke after the last. Señor CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO, who had been Minister under the reign of the ex-Queen, passed a severe censure on Señor FIGUEROLA for having brought charges that were not supported by satisfactory proof. He contended that at the time of FERDINAND VII. (which there were about eighty millions worth of jewels in the royal palaces of Madrid, part of which that King had acquired with his own money, and which he had left to his heirs by will or his and their personal property. Among those last-mentioned jewels he said, the crown, the scepter, the insignias of the Order of the Golden Fleece and the hereditary possessions of CHARLES III. were not included, in fact they were at this moment deposited in the Bank of Spain. He added further contended that even if any jewels had been brought home by MARIA CHRISTINA, her daughter would not be responsible for them unless it any, inasmuch as they had received their jewels on the faith of their being their lawful property. Señor CANOVAS said that he did not wish to insult the flag of the Bourbons, although the presidents of the Carlists and Republicans entitled him to do so.

"In this debate," he exclaimed, "I will only prove that the Minister had neither enough nor right to designate Isabel of such high position by the opprobrious epithet of thieves." The former Minister of ISABELLA II. concluded by giving a sort of paternal admonition to the Ministry on the subject of the danger which they would incur by yielding to the Republicans. He acknowledged that the latter, though conquered for the moment, was still in line, and gaining strength day by day. He conjured the Ministers to beware, so as not to dig a trap under their feet by slandering monarchy in the persons of the ex-Queens, and thus exposing the royal candidature to the attacks of the Republicans.

Señor FIGUEROLA listened calmly and silently to all these attacks. To-day he is to make his reply and to bring forward his proofs, which, he asserts, are convincing on the subject of the criminality of the two ex-Queens. The House is all but decided to appoint a commission of inquiry, in spite of the tall talk of the partisans of the House of Bourbon.

CIRCULAR OF THE EX-QUEEN CHRISTINA.

A "memorandum," that is Parisian would certainly style it "say," has been addressed by the ex-Queen CHRISTINA, under the signature of Señor RUMO, her secretary, to all the members of the Corps. The poor old lady seems to be greatly concerned by what she calls "Señor FIGUEROLA's [illegible] statements." But [illegible] charges—the "memorandum" the Minister of Finance to lay aside his veil of irresponsibility on Deputy, so as to give her the pleasure of prosecuting him before the criminal courts for defamation of character. She protests her innocence, but adduces nothing to prove that she does not deserve the ugly appellation which the Minister seeks to fix upon her.

THE ROYAL CANDIDATURE.

The dynastical question seems to take a decisive turn. Señor OLOZAGA telegraphed yesterday to the Government that the Duchess of GENOA had finally accepted the offer of the Spanish Crown for the young Duke; but the parties hoping the to the Italian candidature assert that the Duchess stipulated expressly that the Italian Prince should be elected by a majority of at least two-thirds of the Cortes, and that this election should be ratified by the Spanish nation in a plebiscite. The Carlists, Unionists and Republicans have decided on placing all possible obstacles in the way of this election, and they are even speaking of leaving the legislative hall en masse if the Ministry should come off victorious. This latter project is all the more serious from the fact that, if carried into execution, it would be sure to be followed by civil war.

SPANISH FINANCES.

The state of the Spanish Treasury is deplorable, but the coupons of the bonds of the exterior debt will be paid by the Banque de Paris, (syndicate of the associated bankers.) The Gaceta has not yet announced that Señor FIGUEROLA is in a position to pay the interest of the interior debt. The coupons of the last half year of 1869 and of the first half of 1869 are not yet paid in full, and it is tolerably certain that the holders of Spanish interior bonds will have to wait some time for the interest due on the list of the present month. The Treasury is in such an exhausted state that Señor FIGUEROLA will probably be compelled to maintain against his will the reduction of twenty per cent. on the interest of the Spanish national debt.

SLAVERY IN PORTO RICO.

The Minister of the Colonies has announced to the Cortes that he will shortly present to them a project of law relating to the abolition of slavery and the municipalities of Porto Rico. He has not as yet collected all the documents necessary for this purpose. The Chamber will adjourn on the 20th of this month to the 4th of January next. It is believed that the Ministry will for the third time demand the authorization of the Cortes to expend the produce of the State bonds and the taxes, the present authorization ending at New Year. The commission on the budget is still at work. The situation is as serious as mismanagement can make it.

The Western Distillers—The Recommendation Revoked.

From the Washington Republican, Jan. 1.

General H. L. BURNETT, the attorney for the Western distillers, had an interview yesterday with Commissioner DELANO relative to an extension of the time allowed for the bonded period. The Commissioner decided, after consultation, to send Deputy Commissioners DOUGLASS and GIVEN to Cincinnati to confer with the Western distillers and witness the practical test which is there proposed to give. They will leave here the latter part of next week and have been instructed to call into consultation the supervisors of the Western districts.

The recovery of distillers entered several months since was for the purpose of obtaining the full tax on the spirits distilled after certain experiments made by the Revenue officers were and showing the period of fermentation was fixed at forty-eight hours. No trouble or opposition was experienced until the officers reached Chicago, and there it was alleged the time was too short for the kind of grain used for distilling purposes.

It was for the purpose of obtaining evidence that General BURNETT was employed to present their claim to the Commissioner. On the other hand it is alleged the Western distillers use the same grain and have no difficulty in complying the time prescribed by the regulations for the purpose. It was for the purpose of establishing a uniform period that the experiments were made, and while the Commissioner is willing to grant every privilege conceded, when the claim is based on facts, he is of opinion that these experiments which yield the figures in the amended period are due to his employees, and accordingly directs the Deputy Commissioners in charge to examine the process of fermentation in several of the distilleries in question, and report promptly the result of their investigation.

A University for the South.

From the Charleston (S. C.) Courier, Dec. 31.

There is no reason why the South should not have a university of as high a grade and character as exists in any portion, either of the Union, or in England or Germany. We have the intellect, and we certainly have the material for its creation. And never was the necessity greater than at the present, especially in the seven southern of the Union. For the loyalty of the women of the United States of the South, let them be chosen. It was established just after the war under the auspices of the old Episcopal Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, by which its trustees are appointed.

Although under this charter it is designed for all the youth of the South, it is not sectarian in any particular sense. As we understand it, just as Yale College, which although under Congregational auspices, and its President required to be a minister of that church, yet is of the same time national in its character and educational designs. The University is adapted to a large

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Review of the Past Week.

Very few public sales have taken place at the Exchange Rooms during the week past, and those chiefly by order of the Supreme Court. It has been almost impossible to negotiate private sales, although there has been no decline in the prices demanded. People simply are not in the condition or have not the disposition to buy at the present rates, and owners are generally disposed to wait until times are easier, and hundred property begins once more to move briskly in the market. There has been a slight falling off in the rent of stores, but not so marked as to indicate the beginning of a decline. The brokers in general are sanguine of a good business for the ensuing year, with an advance in prices.

The business of the old year just closed has been well, as compared with that of the preceding twelvemonth. This is probably due in part to an unnatural brisk season in consequence of the overbuying of the business, and in part to the general depression in all branches of business, and the lack of surplus capital for such investments. The value of the class of real estate, can be said to have undergone a decline, and Fifth-avenue and other valuable property has advanced about twenty per cent. since the 1st of January, 1869.

OUR MERCANTILE INTERESTS.

Business Prospective and Retrospective.

AN OUTLOOK UPON THE NEW YEAR.

Cheerful Views of Leading Merchants—Fair Business Last Year—The Commercial Crisis Thought to Have Been Passed.

On this, the first business day of the new year, we present the readers of the TIMES with a comprehensive review of the business of the past year, and, what is better, with a statement of the outlook for 1870, as obtained from the lips of prominent merchants in each branch of business. All of the gentlemen visited gave a free expression to their opinions, and the reasons which led them to the conclusions formed. The sentiments generally expressed were, that the business of 1869 had been far from dull; that it was better than many expected at the beginning of the year; that there was no cause for the great outcry which had been made respecting "hard times" and commercial ruin; and that merchants had, as a general thing, contracted their business, held aloof from hazardous ventures, and so prepared themselves for whatever financial storm might come. Consequently, there had been fewer failures resulting from the decline in gold, and some of the gentlemen expressed the opinion that gold might decline more and more until there should be no premium upon it, and specie payments be resumed without causing any such crash as many had predicted.

The prospects of business for 1870 appear good, and indeed better than was expected a few months ago. The merchants with whom our reporter has conversed, appear very cheerful, and consider that now the danger has passed business will revive, and all classes will enjoy a highly prosperous year.

The failures during 1869 were not much more numerous than in 1868. The aggregate losses were no heavier, if as heavy, as in the last named year. There were forty-five failures reported as occurring in December last, and in December, 1868, there were forty-two. Last year there were about 270 failures, and in 1868 there were 260. Few of the suspensions last year were of great magnitude, but as they were reported they created considerable alarm throughout the country, and this alarm continued until the total liabilities were ascertained to be far less than at first stated. The authority from which these facts are obtained—one of the oldest mercantile agencies in the City—states that there would undoubtedly have been more failures, attended with very disastrous results, had not merchants generally discounted the fall in gold and curtailed their credits accordingly. Again, the telegraph has been extended, and as so generally employed that every pulsation at the great money centre is felt instantly at the extremities of the country, and merchants are thereby enabled to guard against any danger that might threaten and to meet the shock when the "tidal wave" of business depression reached them.

DRY GOODS.

The principal of one of the largest wholesale dry goods houses in this City—a house which does as large a business as any firm in the country—in the course of an interview with our reporter on Saturday, stated that during 1869 the dry goods jobbing business was as good as in any year since 1865, which is noted as being the good year. The profits were as good or better, and the losses less. This is the experience of all large houses in the country. Some concerns, the store expenses of which are very large and the outgo great, have suffered in consequence of their extravagance, but those houses which regulate their expenses so as to leave a fair margin of profit to accumulate, and thus save their capital intact, have enjoyed a very prosperous season of business.

The prospects for 1870, this gentleman states, are as good as they have been, for dry goods are now as low as they ought to be if gold was par. There is little probability of cotton falling in price, for the crop is not so large as it was before the war, when the production averaged 4,000,000 bales per year. In 1869 the crop amounted to about 2,700,000 bales, and it is thought quite likely that a larger crop will be raised this year. The scheme of the planters in working for a "corner" in cotton may fail, as other attempted "corners" have, and then the price will fall. But he thought that it was scarcely probable that cotton would go as low as ten cents per pound—the ante-bellum price. Cotton will remain, he thought, at about twenty-three to twenty-seven cents during the early part of the present year.

The South is rich, and growing wealthy all the time. When the crop was being gathered there was considerable difficulty experienced in getting money with which to move it, but such trouble would not, he thought, be felt in the future. The Western people have been slow in making remittances, owing to the reluctance of the farmers to dispose of their crops at low rates, but the money due from the West is good, and will come forward in due time.

There have been few failures in the dry goods trade during the year, fewer indeed than during previous seasons. The years 1866 and 1867 were bad seasons for failures, but a great many of the suspensions were of a certain class of speculative people. If they gain in a speculation they are extremely eager to pocket the advantage, but, if they lose, they are very apt to let their creditors pocket the loss.

DRUGS.

Messrs. W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & Co. probably stand as high in the estimation of the drug dealers throughout the country as any other house in the City, and their opinions are justly entitled to great weight. They are extensive jobbers and importers of drugs. They state that during the past year the business has been about equal to that of 1868, and that there will be little difference in the receipts of their house, but a probable gain over those of the previous year. Dealers have been very cautious in their purchases, owing to the fluctuations in gold, which tended to keep values unsettled. Another reason is that changes in the tariff have been expected, and a reduction of rates would of course affect the business in drugs materially. The expenses of trade have increased, and the profits have decreased; and while the aggregate quantity of drugs purchased throughout the country has been larger, perhaps, than for two or three years, the returns for the same will be but a trifle over the average. Drugs are, gold coin of the realm, not affected by panics. There is a steady and certain demand for them. Fancy goods, on the contrary, in which most drug houses deal, have been materially affected by the dull times during the past year, and there appears to be general complaint on this point.

During last year the business with the South and West was larger than before, and it is expected that in the present year there will be a large increase in this trade. After the close of the war there was a general disposition manifested among the dealers in this City not to resume the credit system with the South, but to exact cash or very short time for all purchases. The Southern merchants agreed to this course, and while their investments have not been so large as they were under the credit system, the results has been more satisfactory to all parties concerned. It is now feared that the South will plunge into speculation instead of remaining producers, and will hoard their crops for better prices, as is now done by the farmers of the West.

Generally speaking, the condition of the trade is healthy. A system of concentration is springing up by which prominent dealers in the principal cities seek to monopolize the trade of their section; thus, an extensive dealer in St. Louis will draw trade from a large circle in his vicinity, and manage to keep it, thus preventing the small dealers from procuring their stock direct from this City, as has been the case formerly. This course does not affect the importers greatly, but is prejudicial to some extent to the jobbers.

The revenue derived from drugs and spices is about eleven or twelve millions of dollars only. An effort is being made before the present Congress to have the tariff on these articles reduced, and it is thought that success will crown the endeavor. In that case the drug business will be very good indeed during the year 1870.

HARDWARE.

Messrs. CLARKE, WILSON & Co. are largely engaged in the Hardware trade in this City, and they state that the business of the past year was very good and the prospects for 1870 are fair. The trade is very much cut up by traveling agents, who manage to cut down prices so tight there is only a living profit on some classes of goods. The remittances were not as prompt last year as in former seasons, because of the unsettled condition of affairs in the West, Southern not being able to get the prices they wanted for their grain, and consequently Western hardware merchants were unable to obtain the money, with which to meet their engagements. Still, there have been no failures of consequence—that of the house of PATRICK & Co. excepted—and the outstanding indigestion are all considered good.

There was little difference in the business of last year as compared with that of 1868. There were more goods sold last year, but the profits were lessened, so that the aggregate amount of the business was about the same. The prospects for 1870 though not brilliant are good.

PRODUCE.

Mr. DAVID DOWS, of DAVID DOWS & CO., is a director in the Produce Exchange Association, and familiar with all branches of the produce trade. His opinions are certainly entitled to great weight. He states that among the 2,000 members of the Produce Exchange there were few failures of consequence during the past year. The reason probably was that merchants generally looked forward to a tight money market in the Fall, and at the close of the year, and prepared themselves for it by "furling their sails" and getting everything in readiness for the coming storm. Consequently, he does not think that there will be much of a crash after all, and he would not be surprised if gold should gradually decline, until there is no premium upon it, by its own gravitation, as it were, and then specie payments would be resumed without causing much of a monetary or commercial disturbance. He was inclined to take a very cheerful view of the prospects for 1870. The prices are very low now, indeed as low as before the war. At these reduced rates the demand is increasing all the time, both for shipment and for home consumption. So far as the business of the Produce Exchange is concerned, dealers feel that they have passed through any crisis in their affairs, and that the outlook for 1870 is decidedly brilliant. Those houses which have done a regular and not a speculative business, have succeeded, and will succeed in the future, while those which have been reckless, have suffered the consequences by failure.

The gradual decline in gold has been the best thing for trade; when gold is high the commission merchant has two risks—the risk of the fall in gold, and that of a fall in prices. The shipments of wheat were greater last year than in 1868, and it is probable that, in this respect, the business of 1870 will show a very large increase, as the prices of everything are so low.

GROCERIES.

The grocery business of this City is in the hands of a few prominent houses, whose dealings with the trade are very extensive, and their names are well known throughout the country. P. DATER & Co. stand as high as any in this circle. They say that the sales of 1869 were larger than those of the previous year, and the business was very good. There were few failures, and none of importance in this City. Those engaged in the trade look forward to a good business this year, and see no reason why they should be disappointed. Tea, coffee, sugar, and other staples are dealt in on a gold basis mostly, and those houses which hold them on a currency basis feel the fluctuations sensibly.

Brokers in tea, coffee and sugar have felt considerably depressed at times during 1869, but towards the close of the year they were inclined to look forward to the new year with considerable satisfaction. The tea brokers especially are anticipating a lively trade.

RENTS.

Messrs. LLOYD & Co. are probably the largest dealers in rentable property of any house in the City. They state that the demand for stores in the wholesale dry goods centre is greater than the supply; and this also is the testimony of Mr. HOMER MORGAN. Stores in Broadway, down town, have been vacated principally in consequence of the occupants carrying their business further up town; but the rents of these premises are held at but a slight reduction, if any, from former rates. Take it all around, the decline in rents has not exceeded twenty per cent.

REAL ESTATE.

Mr. HOMER MORGAN states that the business of real estate is rather more dull this season than it has been in former years, but this is not astonishing. About the middle of the present month it is expected that business will be brisk, and that there will be life and activity during the present year. Real estate has fallen slightly during 1869, but no more than was expected from the decline in gold. People generally looked forward to a grand crash, expecting it almost every month, but it has not come yet, and may pass over entirely.

Messrs. D. & M. CHAUNCEY, of Brooklyn, refer to the fact that insurance companies are calling in their loans on Brooklyn real estate, and state that it is because they have to pay a tax on mortgages and can invest their money to better advantage in Governments, on which they pay no tax. But to balance this withdrawal the savings banks are preparing to let out their surplus capital to the extent of forty per cent of their receipts, and the banks and capitalists are also ready to make investments of this character. Rents in Brooklyn will probably decline during the Spring in sections out of the immediate centre of the city, but those of buildings in the business quarters and of other desirable property will remain about the same as last year.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

Messrs. BENEDICT, HALL & CO., do a large business in the boot and shoe trade. They state that there were few failures during the year in the City and country, and the business was quite satisfactory generally. In December it is customary to contract for work to be delivered during the early months in the next year, and this season it is found that manufacturers have to pay from six to seven per cent more for their work than they did last year. This is owing to the trade organizations, which have put up prices for work to such an extent as greatly to reduce the dealers' profit. The business of 1869, though larger than that of 1868 in the aggregate, yielded less profit, but dealers have not much cause to complain. With first-class goods the price has advanced somewhat. Dealers are arranging to reduce their current expenses for the present year, and thus meet the increase which they have to pay for labor.

JEWELRY.

Mr. RUSH, one of the large manufacturing jewelers of this City, states that the business of his trade has been good; that there was an increase during 1869 even that of the previous year, and that he has heard no great complaint. The retail houses have not done as well, owing to the scarcity of money in the hands of the people. As to the prospects for 1870, very little can be said just now. They depend greatly upon the condition of the money market.

COTTON.

A cotton broker who deals extensively in this staple, says that the crop of last year was good, reaching the neighborhood of 3,200,000 bales. In December, 1868, the price was 36 cents, but then gold was 134. Now the price is 26¾ cents, and the low rate of gold will make the currency price of cotton two or three cents less than that of December, 1868. Year before last spinners stocked themselves early, and consequently there was not as large demand early last year, but as soon as this stock was exhausted, the demand increased, and during the last half of 1869 business was very brisk. The spinners made money last year, and they will be likely to pay any reasonable price for cotton rather than close their mills. The consumption of cotton in England is greater now than it was in the early part of 1869.

Last year a new feature was adopted by the planters, that of selling on contract. They have sold their cotton and obtained good prices, and they have bought back the staple, which they intend to hold and possibly hope to obtain a "corner" in the market. Large parcels have thus been made for delivery in May and June. This course keeps the market steady. There is as much speculation in cotton as there is in stocks, and it promises to be very active during 1870.

This gentleman considers it a fact that the South is very wealthy, and that there are thirty millions of gold hoarded in the Southern States. This indicates that the prices will be higher during this year than it was last, and some think that the rate will rise within thirty days.

WOOL.

One of the largest wool brokers on Pine-street states that the last season opened fairly for this staple, and for the first six months there was no falling off in prices. The manufacturing interests have been failing for the last eighteen months, and during the last half of 1869 the effect of this failure was sensibly felt. Holders feared to sell on credit, and business was greatly checked, so as at times to be almost paralyzed. The prospect for 1870 is a continuation of the depression of 1869, unless Congress will do something to make money easier. At present there is a general distrust felt in the community.

PLATED AND BRITANNIA WARE.

The Redfield & Rice Manufacturing Company is one of the largest houses engaged in this class of business. They say that the business of the last year was as large as could be expected from the natural shrinkage of prices. As to the prospects of 1870, that depends upon the course of money. For illustration, plated goods are considered as luxuries and people who have little money to spare are not apt to invest extensively in these things. During the holidays, it was noticed that customers would spend but a few dollars, when in former years they laid out $100 or more, and the salesman who secured a $100 customer thought himself very fortunate. There were few failures during 1869.

CLOTHING.

A member of one of the largest clothing houses in the City states that the business of 1869 was, on the whole, very satisfactory. Prices were low, but the demand was greater than before, and sales more rapid. There were few failures. The outlook for 1870 appears to be good, though it is considered unsafe to prognosticate in this respect.

THE GAS NUISANCE.

The Different Methods of Purifying Gas in Use in this Country and in Europe—Report of the Chemist of the Board of Health.

In compliance with the resolution of the Board of Health, directing the Chemist to examine and report upon the different methods of purifying gas employed by the various gas companies in New-York, with such information as he may have obtained abroad in regard to the processes in use, Dr. C. F. CHANDLER, the Chemist of the Board, has submitted a report in which he explains the peculiarities of the four methods of purifying gas now in use. There are, First—The lime process, which consists in passing the gas through milk of lime, the oldest process in use, and very effective, but which has been generally abandoned on account of the difficulty of disposing of the foul milk of lime called "blue billy." Second—The dry lime process, in which dry or slightly moist lime is placed in trays or iron boxes through which the gas is made to pass. This process is very effective, and has generally superseded the wet lime process, but the objection to it has been the foul odors evolved. A system of ventilating the foul lime has been invented and is now in use at both the station One of the Manhattan Company's works, which effects its oxidation in such a manner that the offensive odors evolved are not permitted to escape into the atmosphere, but are passed through a washing apparatus, and finally through a special purifier, after which they are rendered comparatively inoffensive. Third—The process in which Dr. CHANDLER says seems to obviate the nuisance of dry-lime purification. Third—The Laming process, in which the hydrated sesquioxide of iron is used as a substitute for lime for purifying gas, being prepared of a suitable quality by mixing copperas or sulphate of iron with slaked lime and sawdust, and exposing the mixture to the air, to oxidize the protoxide of iron to the sesquioxide. The resulting mixture contains hydrated sesquioxide of iron, sulphate of lime and sawdust. This is very effective in removing the sulphur compounds from the gas, but there is some difference of opinion as to the completeness with which the carbonic acid is removed. Fourth. The iron ore process, in which the natural hydrated sesquioxide of iron or "bog iron ore" is used. This mixture, as improved by Messrs. HOWARD and CARTWRIGHT, has been in use nearly two years and gives entire satisfaction.

Process No. 1 has been almost entirely abandoned; process No. 2, though still in general use in this country, has been almost universally abandoned in Europe; process No. 3 is used in many of the European gas works; process No. 4 is now most generally used in Europe, and in this country is used by the New-York Gaslight Company, and by two or three companies in Massachusetts. Dr. CHANDLER argues strongly in favor of the iron processes, as compared with the lime processes. Referring to the history of the gas nuisance, the first complaint regarding which was made against the Manhattan Company, April 24, 1852; and sets forth that the iron processes might be introduced effectively with little difficulty.

Ludlow-Street Jail—Number of Imprisonments, &c., During 1869.

During the past year the sombre portals of Ludlow-street Jail have opened and shut on several hundred prisoners, on those amenable to the civil laws of this City and State as well as those held for United States offences. The total number of temporary and permanent cases of imprisonment in the jail for the year, so far as the papers can estimate, was about 1,800, the former class being the most numerous. The charges on which the prisoners were confined are various and widely separated, some being committed for alleged murder, manslaughter on the high seas, counterfeiting, embezzlement, &c., and some for less flagrant offences, defrauding creditors, non-payment of damages in civil suits, and delinquencies in military matters. None but United States prisoners were held on the criminal charges, the rest being sent to the jail under civil process issued by State officers. At present there are about 150 persons locked up in the jail, a few of whom are serving out sentences imposed for violation of the national laws. The jail is under the wardenship of Mr. J. M. TRACY, who is assisted by Mr. W. L. GARDINER as deputy warden. The latter gentleman has held the position he now occupies for thirteen years, and is thoroughly conversant with its duties.

Homeless Wanderers—An Insane Woman and her Child.

From the Quincy (Ill.) Whig, Dec. 31.

Considerable excitement was created yesterday by the strange actions and loud cries and exclamations of a woman who was being taken in an express wagon to the Poorhouse. She attacked the officer who had her in charge with great ferocity and desperation, scratching his face, pulling his hair, and calling for help. She declared she only wanted money to keep her for another day until her brother came, and that she would not go to the Poorhouse. The sympathies of many of the bystanders were strongly aroused, and had she behaved less unseemly and more calmly, there were many parties ready to volunteer pecuniary aid, and save her what she so much dreaded, but her struggles were such that nothing could be learned of her needs or condition. The officer in charge appeared not in any way harsh in his treatment, but was forced by main strength to hold her while the team conveyed her to the Poorhouse.

A brother-in-law of the mother, a girl about 9 or 10 years old, who accompanied and fought as much as the mother. From what we could learn at the Police Office the following is their recent history, founded on the woman's statement to them and others:

The girl her daughter were found on the streets one night about two weeks ago, the child crying, and were guided to the Ballard House. She stated that she had no means, that her husband was a soldier who had died in the service during the war, while she was living in St. Louis; that having no relatives there, she went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and lived with her husband's mother, she died, and then, with 600 pennies money from the Government and the contribution of friends, she started for California to live with her sister, going by way of St. Louis, at which place she was robbed and an object of charity. The authorities there sent her on as far as Omaha, where she could not get sufficient help to go further, but was sent eastward and landed here, destitute, and taken to the Ballard House, as stated. The Mayor ordered her kept there for a few days until she could hear from her friends, as she said there were those who would help her. At the end of a week she was sent to the Poorhouse, where she was as uncontrollable and destructive to property that they were forced to let her go. Yesterday she was found upon the streets begging, and was taken in charge by an officer, and by the proper authority ordered to the Poorhouse. She remained there a night or more and had to an express wagon, and the result was the scene we have described. We learn that soon after she reached there she managed to escape with her daughter, and the last that was seen of her she was walking through the cemetery. She claimed to have a brother in Chillicothe, Mo., but many persons believe her to be insane or intoxicated.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

The cadet corps of the gymnastic school of the Turn-verein of this City had their annual parade, under the direction of their instructor, Captain HERMAN RENNICKE, at Turner Hall, in Orchard-street, yesterday afternoon. They are about 150 in number, from 11 to 17 years old, and comprise three companies. They went through the different evolutions in common, quick and double quick time, drilled in the manual of arms, and gave a dress parade, to the satisfaction of their parents and friends present.

The regular exercises of the Norfolk-street M. E. Sabbath School were pleasantly interrupted yesterday afternoon by the presentation of a costly Bible to Mr. N. WARD CADY by the pupils of his Bible class "No. 23." The Superintendent of the school, Mr. THOMAS, delivered the address, which was feelingly responded to by the recipient of the gift. The affair was a complete surprise to Mr. CADY, who was quite overcome thereby. The Committee of Presentation, consisted of Messrs. GEORGE E. LANE, WALTER FELTER, Dr. E. W. HOLMES and W. H. FAUGH, who carried out the object of their classmates with rare skill and satisfaction.

The first of a series of special services and prayer meetings to be held during the week took place yesterday in the Jane-street Presbyterian Church. In the morning Rev. J. D. MATTHEWS delivered an impressive discourse from Hebrews ii., 3, and a prayer meeting was held in the evening which was largely attended. A New Year's discourse to the young people and children of the Church and Sabbath School was to have been delivered in the afternoon by Rev. J. D. MATTHEWS, but on account of the inauspicious state of the weather it was postponed till next Sunday afternoon.

At St. James' Episcopal Church, in East Seventy-first-street, near Third-avenue, last evening Rev. U. TRACY, of Yonkers, preached on "Prevailing Immoralities." He said the children of this country were being brought up in an atmosphere tainted with wickedness and dishonesty, after which he went on to show that the spirit of dishonesty and lawlessness prevailed very largely in business circles. He regretted the signs of moral disobedience which were to be found in the theatres and music halls, saying the days of the Church were numbered unless it took strong ground against the prevailing immoralities.

The Spanish gunboats still remain anchored off Staten Island. Their firemen and engineers are strictest in the departure of the flotilla may be looked for to-morrow or next day, as the vessels are now ready for sea.

George Francis Fenian Foncier TRAIN halted at the Tammany Wigwam last evening, while on his meteoric course towards Omaha, the Rocky Mountains or the moon. The ostensible object of his visit was to draw a comparison between the old Jordan of the Bible and the beautiful character of the Saviour, but his discourse was on almost all subjects except this. No select committee crowded the platform, no clerk sexton poured the water or dusted the service books. The first intimation was a gleam of brass buttons radiating through the hall, a globe of flowing curls rising into view, of which Neptune might be jealous, a hop, step and jump, and the avenging Nemesis of old Fayriam gallantly treads the hunting ground of the chiefs of Tammany. In a few seconds he demolished England, President GRANT and his Cabinet, Congress, the opposents and depreciators of Omaha lots, the Credit Mobilier, the aspirations of TRAIN for the President and woman suffrage. He then waves his glove to young America, and with one sweep of his coat tails demolishes the trustees of the Cooper Institute, and is gone, having an engagement, he said, to lecture before the Comanches in New-Mexico to-night.

At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out on the top floor of a tenement house No. 747 Ninth-avenue, occupied by WILLIAM SCHIEFFELIN, cigar maker; loss $100; insured. The second floor, kept by ALBERT BURNS; loss $100. Building owned by HUGH LEWIS; damaged $70; insured.

The season thus far has been very remarkable for its mild temperature. During the fourteen hours ending at 3 P. M. Sunday, nearly two inches of rain fell. Such an amount for the 2d day of January is extraordinary. During the period from 1804 to 1869, the Hudson River closed, in 1804, on Jan. 6; in 1828, on Jan. 11. The earliest period was Nov. 25, in 1857 and 1858. In 1849 it opened as early as Feb. 4; in the cold year of 1843, as late as April 12.

During the heavy gale of Sunday the barometrical reading at 6 o'clock P. M. was 29.16 inches. Such a low depression and extraordinary gale has not occurred for years. On Feb. 23, 1869, at 9 o'clock P. M., the barometer was 29.25; on Feb. 4, at 7 A. M., 29.17; in Dec. 7, 1868, at 3 P. M., 29.22.

Rev. Dr. DEMAREST, the President of Rutgers College, New-Brunswick, N. J., preached in the Reformed Church, in Grand-street, Jersey City, yesterday, a sermon appropriate to the beginning of the new year, from the 26th, 30th and 31st verses of the seventh chapter of First Corinthians.

The body of a dead infant was last evening found on a fire escape of No. 217 Mott-street, the tenement house. The escape is opposite the window of room No. 11, now occupied by Mrs. PITTMAN. The child is supposed to have been left there by a German girl named MARY MILLER, on Christmas Day. The case is under investigation by the Coroner and Police.

CHARLES CARSON, of No. 428 Eighth-avenue, fell from a beam in Third-avenue yesterday afternoon, near Sixty-second-street, falling on his head and stunning himself so that he had to be removed to the Nineteenth Ward Police Station on a stretcher. He was cared for, recovered and went home.

BRIDGET CONLON, aged 40, died suddenly yesterday morning at No. 422 East Thirteenth-street, from an unknown cause. The Coroner was summoned.

At 7:15 P. M. JOHN LATHAN, aged 57, deck hand on the brig Andrew, was taken home at Gowanus, seriously bruised while attempting to fasten the vessel to the dock at the foot of Thirtieth-street, North River, during the present gale. It was reported that the mate was drowned.

GEORGE BURNETT, alias Sergeant Major, a colored man, was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having had a hand in the burglary committed on the 20th of October, in the store of SIMON COHEN, at No. 60 West Broadway, when $500 worth of goods were stolen. The prisoner had been first arrested on another complaint of robbery, which could not be substantiated. As he had sent a friend for a jimmy and some false keys, and had been seen to leave Mr. MORRIS' store, Justice HOGAN fully committed him.

MARTIN KANE brutally beat his wife on Saturday night, at No. 10 Lispenard-street, and on being arraigned before Justice HOGAN was remanded for trial.

ALEXANDER PEARSON, of No. 544 Broome-street, accidentally fell in the street and broke his arm.

Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest yesterday, at Bellevue Hospital, over the remains of EDWARD NOTT, aged 60, who died from the effects of injuries sustained on the 1st of September, by a fall through the skylight of premises of No. 126 West Forty-first-street.

EDWARD GAINES, aged 30, died suddenly yesterday, at No. 116 Baxter-street. Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest.

THOMAS FAGAN was found dead in the hallway of premises No. 99 Morris-street, having been injured by a fall down stairs. The body was removed to the Morgue.

CONRAD OESTERECHER, of No. 55 Roosevelt-street, was stabbed in the side by unknown persons, early yesterday morning, in Norfolk-street, and was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

MARGARET GRAVIT died yesterday, at No. 11½ Amity-street, from the effects of burns sustained on the 15th ult., she having dropped a bottle of benzine on a hot stove, and had her clothes set on fire. An inquest will be held today.

Early yesterday morning JOHN MULLIGAN, of No. 19 Monroe-street, was found grossly intoxicated in Jamesslip, and in a condition badly bruised. As he could not give any account of himself, JOHN was sent to Bellevue.

JAMES MALLON was thrown from his wagon yesterday in Greenwich-avenue, near Thirteenth-street, and almost instantly killed. The remains were removed to the late residence of the deceased, No. 231 West Twenty-first-street.

At 11 o'clock last evening a fire occurred on the second floor of No. 224 Canal-street, caused by some children playing near the stove. It was put out before serious damage was done.

NICHOLAS DEVRAU, aged 26, while going on board the steamer at Pier No. 1 East River, at about 8 o'clock last evening, fell overboard and was drowned. The body was recovered.

BROOKLYN.

The Park Congregational Church, of Brooklyn, inaugurated the building of a chapel by the adjournment of the New Year's prayer meeting to the corner of Seventh-street and Sixth-avenue, a most eligible site, where ground was broken with appropriate services. The chapel is to cost $20,000. The ceremonies thus which included liberal donations from kindred churches of the city, already shown nearly the required amount. The flourishing Sunday School was on the night of the 30th, treated to a Christmas festival jubilee. Addresses, music, refreshments and various presentations made the affair very interesting. The pastor received $100 in money, together with several other presents.

During a fight in Eighteenth-street, near Eighth-avenue, on Saturday night, JOHN DOOLEY and WILLIAM MCGUIRE were severely stabbed with a knife. JOHN GIBBONS, FRANCIS WHALEN, JOHN BRENNAN and JAMES WHITMAN, parties engaged in the affray, were arrested and locked up.

JOHN ROSS, aged 50 years, residing corner of Smith and Third streets, fell down stairs on Saturday night, and was instantly killed.

WILLIAM H. KEAGAN, residing at No. 80 Jay-street, was arrested yesterday by Officer Dunn, of the Forty-second Precinct, charged with having stabbed JOHN FINN in the right side with an sword knife, inflicting a severe wound. Keagan was arraigned in Police Court with KEAGAN, who was bonded to keep the peace.

The Reformed Church in Tompkins-street, Gowanus, of which Rev. R. B. FINNEY is pastor, was dedicated to the service of God yesterday. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. BURGY, of the Church on the Heights, and Rev. Mr. SMITH assisted in the services.

Rev. Dr. JOSEPH T. DURYEA dedicated the Clinton-avenue Presbyterian Church, of which he is pastor, yesterday. Notwithstanding the storm there were good congregations at both the services.

There was a large accession to the South Ninth-street Congregational Church, Williamsburg, yesterday. Rev. LEONARD W. BACON is pastor of this church, and his ministry appears to be manifesting itself in large results.

Burglars stole $30 worth of plated ware from the house of Mrs. GILES, No. 64 Lawrence-street, some time on Saturday night.

LONG ISLAND.

The new Episcopal church at Centre Islip is rapidly progressing; it is entirely inclosed, and when finished will be one of the handsomest and neatest specimens of church architecture in Suffolk County.

A new monthly newspaper called Our Own is soon to be issued at Port Jefferson. It is to be published in the interest of temperance. There are thirteen papers published in Suffolk County, one weekly, one semi-monthly, one monthly and one quarterly.

The Flushing and North Side Railroad Company are erecting a fine two-story depot at Woodside.

The Freemasons of Huntington are completing the erection of a large Masonic hall. The building will be of brick, and the lower floor used for stores.

An effort is being made by the citizens of East Norwich to raise funds sufficient to build a public hall.

The Knights of Hell Gate, a Fantastical Association, of Astoria, paraded the streets of Flushing New Year's Day. They turned out fifty horses and men, accompanied with a chariot containing a number of Fantastic ladies, drawn by the bones of an old horse.

NEW-JERSEY.

JOHN FULLARD, DOMINICK FEENEY and GEORGE BRUCE, who so brutally assaulted Officer LYNCH, of the Jersey City Police, on Saturday night, were yesterday committed by Recorder MARTINDALE, of Jersey City, for trial. SARAH FEENEY, MARIA KELLY and BRIDGET FULLER were also taken into custody yesterday for having assisted in the assault. They did the woman's part of the work—pulling out the officer's hair by the handful. Mrs. FULLER is said to have no struck the officer three or four times over the head with a bottle.

MICHAEL MADDEN was found roaming the streets of Hoboken at early hour yesterday morning in an insane condition, and was taken into custody. The Recorder handed him over to the care of his friends in this City.

WILLIAM HARRISON was accidentally shot in the thigh on South Seventh-street, Hoboken, on Saturday morning, by a friend who fired a pistol in honor of the incoming year. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where his wound was dressed.

Mrs. ELIZABETH MCGINNIS died suddenly at her residence in Wayne-street, Jersey City, yesterday morning. She had retired in the evening in good health. A little after midnight she began complaining, but had scarce uttered her complaint when she expired. Coroner BURNS, who was notified, will hold an inquest this evening.

CECILE C. NICOLLY, of No. 37 East Fair-street, Newark, was run over on Saturday night in Hamilton-street by a lager-beer wagon, driven by GUSTAVE SUPERNAT, and so badly injured that his life is despaired of.

The body of an infant was found yesterday-evening tied in a cigar box floating in the Morris Canal basin at Jersey City. Coroner BURNS gave a permit for its burial.

A CIRCUS REMINISCENCE.

The Elephant Columbus on the Rampage—Race for Life—Three Men and a Dozen Animals Killed.

From the Cincinnati Chronicle, Dec. 31.

Thirty years ago to-day, on the 31st of December, 1839, the famous rampage of the elephant Columbus occurred near New-Orleans, and as the only living witnesses of the affair are residents of Cincinnati at present, we will give a short account of the elephantine tear:

RAYMOND & WAILDING's Circus and Menagerie, which had been showing separately in the centre of Louisiana, were ordered by the proprietors to rendezvous at a point three miles above Algiers—which town is directly opposite New-Orleans—on the 30th of December, for the purpose of combination, which was the largest that has ever appeared in the South, might march into the Crescent City on New Year's Day. With one branch of the show was the elephant Columbus, and with the other Hannibal, both of whom achieved national fame afterwards. The junction had been formed, and the procession was nearly in readiness to move, when, unfortunately, the two elephants were brought together, and they immediately proceeded to test their pugilistic accomplishments. Their keepers interfered and succeeded in parting them, and quieted either, but Columbus was not to be so easily satisfied. He stood glaring around for a few minutes, and then struck his keeper's horse a fearful blow with his trunk, and followed it up by thrusting his immense tusks (over six feet long) through the animal's body. The keeper, WM. CREDE, fell with his horse, and the elephant next attacked him, picking him up with his trunk and dashing him against the ground with such force as to break half the bones in his body and cause instant death. Columbus then marched along the line until he reached the llama case, which he tossed and demolished. Hitherto his next movement was to make a dive for JOHN ROBINSON and ARTHUR CRIPPEN, both of this city, who were connected with the service, but these gentlemen being on horseback, succeeded, although with great trouble and danger, in escaping. Columbus now passed the caravan on a run, and soon met a drayman driving two mules, both of which fell victims to his rage, as did also the driver, who attempted to escape by running, but was overtaken. Passing through Algiers, the elephant soon came across a negro man sitting on a fence, and tore down the fence to get at him, and then tore him piecemeal. The negro was a slave, and Columbus' owners were required to pay $1,000 for killing him. Further on, about nine miles from his starting point, the elephant met a Frenchman and a party of negroes, who had a dancing party on a dancing place, but here he met his match, and after a combat of nearly an hour he gave up and was chained, having first received three bullets from a rifle, just below the right eye. The wounds occasioned no inconvenience, however, beyond producing running sores, which lasted till Columbus died. The death was caused by his falling through a bridge at North Adams, Mass., in 1864, and breaking his neck. In his rampage the elephant killed nearly a dozen horses, mules, cows and calves, for which his owners were compelled to pay about $20,000. The circus and menagerie company was composed of only twenty-eight men, of whom but three are known to be living at present, they being JOHN ROBINSON, circumnavigator, and ARTHUR F. CRIPPEN, watchman at the I. & C. depot in the city, and LOUIS FIRMAN, dry goods merchant at Laurel, Ind., all three of whom witnessed the disaster, and were compelled to observe extreme caution to preserve their own lives. Mr. CRIPPEN subsequently had both arms broken by Columbus while assisting in shipping him in Philadelphia.

Child Abducted—A Long and Unsuccessful Pursuit.

From the Milwaukee Wisconsin, Dec. 30.

The most singular case of child abduction that ever came to our hearing was related to us last evening by the afflicted and half-crazed mother, who has been in our city for the last four days. The scene of the occurrence is dated in Washington City. The little girl, it appears, had been left in the charge of an itinerant doctor and wife, who were stopping at a public boarding house, while the parents made a visit to Boston. On their return from a week's absence, they found that the doctor and wife had absconded from the boarding house, three days previously, taking away the little girl, and all the effects left in their charge. They were notified by a policeman at the depot, buying tickets for out West. Since then, for five weeks, no trace of them has been found.

The little girl is four and a half years old, and is represented as a prodigy of beauty and loveliness. She has a most affectionate disposition, and is a pet with everybody. She has light hair and large hazel eyes. She is most animated and spiritual expression. She has the singing talents, and sings many songs, such as "Captain Jinks," &c., and "Kiss me, Mother, kiss your darling," with brilliant effect. She had a plaid cape cloak, black velvet hat, bound with plaid velvet, a plaid, red and black dress, and another of plain red. Her name is IDA FLORA BURNHAM. Her father's name is NEWELL, and her mother's ABBY N. BURNHAM. The absconding doctor's name is C. S. MANCHESTER. He had been in Washington about a month, but had generally floated about New England. He is of medium size, dark complexion, dark, grayish, curly hair, dark penetrating eyes, dark full whiskers, straight nose, and he is very full faced. His hat is a cone, tongue and a "taking" manner. He wore a dark overcoat, black coat and a jockey hat.

Mrs. MANCHESTER is described as a wild, nervous, volcanic little body, with dark short hair, dark eyes, dark complexion, and full round face. She wears blonde or light, with straight pants. She has no children of her own, and took to the little girl with extravagant fondness. She seemed at times possessed of fanatical vagueness, and expressed the idea that children were in some manner common property, and that no one had exclusive rights in them. She occasionally overflowed with religious fervor, and then again would break out in most rapid vituperative speech and manner. She appeared to be the tool of the man.

The distracted parents of the girl spent two weeks in Philadelphia, consulting mediums and trying to get trace of the parties by telegraph and private means, without publicity. They spent a week in Chicago in the same fruitless search, after giving brief notices in two of the newspapers. From there they were directed to consult a famous medium in Milwaukee, and arrived here Saturday last. The Old "Mohawk Chieftain" and other spirits were early applied to, but so far their battery forces seem at fault or inoperative. The old Mohawk described the parties clearly, and then disclosed the spirit presence of a tall, stooping, bald-headed, crippled old crone, who seemed to have power to cut off all revelations of the earthly whereabouts of the child. The old woman reported that it had been taken away from its too doting mother; that the child would be developed physically thereby, and in due time be restored to her parents. This sort of spiritual hocus pocus disclosure gives little satisfaction to the mother, a little nervous, volatile and excitable woman, who is already overborne with anxiety and grief. She declares she will visit every quarter of the earth and heavens before she will give over search for her lost darling. The father bears himself with comparative coolness and philosophy, and is instituting exhaustive inquiries through a little clairvoyant, who have been freely and kindly entertained by spiritualist friends while in Milwaukee. They are now exhausted of means, and dependent on railroad and personal charities. The latest intimations of those child from the spirit intelligence seem to point to St. Louis, and thither the afflicted parents set forth to-day.

The Lengthening Days and the Strengthening Cold—How their Reputation is in Connecticut.

From the Hartford Post, Jan. 1.

"As the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen," says the old maxim, which has failed to come true thus far this season. The days begin to increase in length on the 23d ult., and the rain up to the end of the year was four minutes. It is true this is hardly sufficient to make much difference either way, and January may be necessary to verify the old adage. Still, as the college professor used to say, when his retorts gave out or his
